

The Flogging of Phineas McIntosh

A Tale of Colonial Folly and Injustice, Bechuanaland 1933

Michael Crowder

In September 1933, Tshekedi Khama, Regent of the Bangwato in Britain's Bechuanaland Protectorate, sentenced a young white labourer to a flogging, provoking a crisis that had repercussions not just in southern Africa but throughout the British Empire. In a richly documented new book Michael Crowder deftly uses this incident to examine the nature of the colonial relationship during this period — in particular, race relations in southern Africa.

Kenyan Communities in the Age of Imperialism

The Central Region in the Late Nineteenth Century

Charles H. Ambler

During the last decades of the nineteenth century, Central Kenya's small agricultural communities struggled to define their identities and preserve their autonomy despite the expansion of major commerce, the initial penetration of imperial power, and the devastation wrought by drought, epidemic and famine. In this book Charles Ambler uses a regional — rather than an ethnic or tribal — perspective to examine the history of central Kenya during this dynamic period.
