

Editorial Announcement

Since March 1986, BJHS has been produced for the Society by Blackwell Scientific Publications to whom readers as well as editors have reason to be grateful, not only for efficient publication but for numerous suggestions that have improved the journal's quality and appearance. However, even the happiest of relationships have sometimes to be brought to an end. On behalf of Council, I have to announce that, as from March 1991, publication will be in the hands of Cambridge University Press, to whom we look with confidence for maintenance of the highest standards. Because the present issue is the last to be produced by Blackwell Scientific, I should like, on behalf of the Society, to thank Keith Bowker and his colleagues in Oxford for all they have done during the past five years. And because the editor alone knows how much work goes on behind the scenes, it is a pleasure to add a personal note of gratitude for a high level of support and co-operation. In particular I should like to thank Cate Foster for her initiative and enthusiasm as desk-editor. Her generous assistance has been greatly valued.

SPECIAL ISSUE: ECOLOGY, NATURE AND SCIENCE

We would like to invite contributions and suggestions for a proposed special issue of the Journal dealing with environmental sciences, broadly defined, in historical perspective. Anyone wishing to present or propose articles or reviews is invited to contact Dr M. Shortland, Department of History and Philosophy of Science, University of Sydney, Sydney NSW 2006, Australia, from whom further information is available.
