

Does Medical Presence Decrease the Perceived Risk of Substance-Related Harm at Music Festivals? – CORRIGENDUM

Matthew Brendan Munn;<sup>1</sup> Melissa Sydney White;<sup>2</sup> Alison Hutton;<sup>3</sup> Sheila Turris;<sup>1</sup> Haddon Rabb;<sup>4</sup> Adam Lund;<sup>1</sup> Jamie Ranse<sup>4</sup>

-
1. UBC Emergency Medicine, Vancouver, Canada
  2. UBC Southern Medical Program, Kelowna, Canada
  3. University of Newcastle, Australia
  4. UBC Mass Gathering Medicine Interest Group, Canada

doi:10.1017/S1049023X19004631

<https://doi.org/10.1017/S1049023X19002656>; Published by Cambridge University Press: 06 May 2019.

In the original publication of the abstract, “Does Medical Presence Decrease the Perceived Risk of Substance-Related Harm at Music Festivals?” the name of author Haddon Rabb was misspelled.<sup>1</sup> The abstract has been corrected.

---

Reference

1. Munn MB, White MS, Hutton A, et al. Does medical presence decrease the perceived risk of substance-related harm at music festivals? Prehosp Disaster Med. 2019;34(Suppl 1):s123.