METHODS OF MENTAL PRAYER

Cardinal Lercaro

A very thorough study in which the Cardinal Archbishop of Bologna deals with the various schools of mental prayer which have flourished since the 16th century, expounding and contrasting the different methods which they teach. His survey covers the contributions made by many well-known saints, and special attention is paid to the Exercises of St Ignatius. The introductory chapters discuss the necessity of mental prayer, as agreed by the whole ascetic tradition, and the conclusion suggests why these methods have fallen out of favour, and what should be done about it.

THE DIRECTION OF NUNS

(A HANDBOOK FOR CONVENT CHAPLAINS, CONFESSORS,

The Direction of Nuns is the seventh volume in the series, but unlike its predecessors it is most particularly prepared for the guidance and assistance of priests. It considers the duties and responsibilities of those whose office it is to minister to the spiritual needs of religious sisters. The first part of the book is concerned with the Theology of the religious life of women; the second part adapts these principles for the various needs of the Confessor, the Chaplain, the Preacher, the Ecclesiastical Superior, etc. Finally, the third part deals with the work actually done in this field since the time of Leo XIII. 16s. 6d.
