Hein's new legislative History provides an excellent starting point for research into this significant legislation. This handsomely bound set brings together nearly 100 documents totaling close to 6,000 pages of primary material which Congress considered and published during the law-making process. This core collection which is preserved on long-life acid-free paper includes: the full text of the law; the major published congressional reports; presidential statements; congressional hearings and debates; all enacted companion bills as well as other related House and Senate bills; a table of statutory deadlines; a compilation of cases cited; chronology of events; and an extensive bibliography.
