

Activities

Diane Blair, professor, department of political science, University of Arkansas, was named a member of the Board of Directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

George Edwards III, Jordon Professor in the Liberal Arts, Texas A&M University, has been appointed editor of the journal Presidential Studies Quarterly, published by the Center for the Study of the Presidency.

Representative Lee Hamilton (D-IN), a long-time supporter of the Association's Congressional Fellowship Program and recipient of APSA's 1999 Hubert H. Humphrey Award, will retire from the U.S. House and become director of the Woodrow Wilson Center for Scholars in January 1999.

Jorge Heine, a past president of the Caribbean Studies Association and of the Chilean Political Science Association, and currently Chile's ambassador to South Africa, recently presented his credentials to King Mswati III of Swaziland, where he will be cross-accredited. Heine is also concurrent ambassador to Namibia, Mozambique, and Zimbabwe.

Ambassador Chan Hengshee, Singapore's ambassador to the United States and a distinguished political scientist, delivered a talk as part of the Center for the Study of the Presidency's monthly ambassador briefing in Washington. Hengshee was previously permanent ambassador from Singapore to the United Nations.

Douglas A. Hibbs, professor, department of economics, Göteborg University, was elected president of the European Public Choice Society.

Michael R. Kagay, editor of news surveys for the The New York Times, has been named president of the American Association for Public Opinion Research for 1998–99. Kagay earned his doctorate in political science from the University of Wisconsin, Madison in 1972 and served on the faculty at Princeton University for ten years prior to entering the private sector.

Robert O. Keohane, James B. Duke Professor of Political Science at Duke University and president-elect of the American Political Science Association, received an honorary doctorate in September 1998 from the University of Aarhus, Denmark. The citation emphasized Keohane's work on interdependence, international institutions, sovereignty, and research design in political science.

Laura Neack, associate professor of political science, Miami University (OH) has been named associate editor of International Politics.

Administrative Appointments

Kenneth Bickers, director of undergraduate studies, department of political science, Indiana University.

Ann O'M. Bowman, vice chair, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

J. Ransom Clark, vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculty, Muskingum College.

Roger A. Coate, director of undergraduate studies, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

F. Chris Garcia, provost and vice president for academic affairs (interim), University of New Mexico.

Steven W. Hays, M.P.A. coordinator, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

FOR THE RECORD

Asia Scholars Join Washington Policy Community

Kenneth G. Lieberthal and Susan Shirk, faculty members at the University of Michigan and University of California, San Diego, respectively, have recently been named to senior policy positions within the Clinton administration.

In August, Lieberthal was named Special Assistant to the President and Senior Director for Asian Affairs at the National Security Council. The Arthur F. Thurnau Professor of Political Science and the William Davidson Professor of Business Administration, Lieberthal has served on the faculty at UM since 1983. A leading China scholar, he served as director of the UM Center for Chinese Studies from 1986 to 1989. Lieberthal has served as a consultant for the Departments of State and Commerce, for the World Bank, the Rand Corporation, the Kettering Foundation, and the Aspen Institute. He is the author or editor of several works, primarily on China, including Governing China: From Revolution Through Reform and an edited collection, Constructing China: The Interaction of Culture and Economics, with Shuen-fu Lin and Ernest P. Young.

Joining Lieberthal in DC is Susan Shirk, who has been appointed Deputy Assistant Secretary in the Bureau of East Asia and Pacific Affairs at the Department of State. Formerly director of the University of California's systemwide Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (1991–97) and professor of political science at the University of California, San Diego, Shirk's latest book is The Political Logic of Economic Reform in China (1993). Previous publications include Competitive Comrades: Career Incentives and Student Strategies in China, and an edited collection titled, The Challenge of China and Japan. She is on the Board of Governors for the East-West Center and is a founding member of the United States Committee of the Council for Security and Cooperation in Asia-Pacific.

Susan Hunter, director of service learning, West Virginia University.

Scott Keeter, chair, department of public and international affairs, George Mason University; formerly Virginia Commonwealth University.

Harlan Lewin, chair, department of political science, San Diego State University.

David B. Robertson, chair, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Denise Scheberle, chair, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay.

Sandra K. Schneider, director of graduate studies, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Harvey Starr, interim chair, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina.

Otis H. Stephens, associate dean, College of Arts and Sciences, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Brian Turner, chair, department of political science, Randolph-Macon College, for the 1998–99 academic year.

Bruce M. Unger, interim dean, Randolph-Macon College, during the 1998–99 academic year

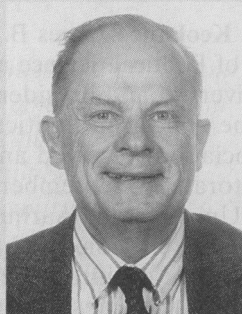

Nelson Wikstrom, chair, department of political science and public administration, Virginia Commonwealth University.

John Witte, associate director, Robert M. La Follette Institute, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

New Appointments

Katherine Barbieri, assistant professor, department of political science, Vanderbilt University; formerly University of North Texas.

Susanne Hoerber Rudolph, William Benton Distinguished Service Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago, was inducted into the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in April. Election to the Academy recognizes significant contributions to science and scholarship. Rudolph is coauthor, with Lloyd Rudolph, of the forthcoming Reversing the Gaze: Amar Singh's Diary as Narrative of Imperial India.

M. Crawford Young, Rupert Emerson and H. Edwin Young Professor of Political Science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in April. A scholar of African politics, his publications include Politics in the Congo, The Politics of Cultural Pluralism, The Rise and Decline of the Zairian State (with Thomas Turner), and Ideology and Development in Africa.

Tukumbi Lumumba-Kasongo has been named Herbert J. Charles and Florence Charles Faegre Professor of Political Science for a five-year term at Wells College. Currently chair of the international relations department, Lumumba-Kasongo also serves as coeditor of the International Journal of Comparative Sociology, and an associate editor and researcher for Comparative Education and International Relations in Africa.

Donald C. Menzel, has joined the faculty of Northern Illinois University and been named director of NIU's division of public administration. Menzel was most recently director of the public administration program and the Institute of Government at the University of South Florida.

Mary Fainsoid Katzenstein, professor of government at Cornell University, was presented the 1998 Mentor Award of The Society for Women in International Political Economy. Her award citation read, in part, "[She] has earned the respect and adoration of innumerable people. For junior women in particular, she has served as a role model for combining work and family, research and teaching, service, and self-preservation."

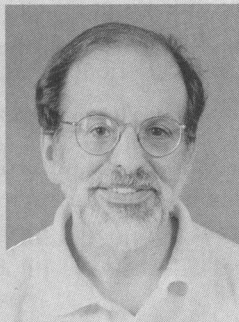

Philip Norton, professor of government and director of the Centre for Legislative Studies, University of Hull (UK), has been made a Lord in the United Kingdom. His new title will be Lord Norton of Louth, and he will sit as a Conservative peer in the House of Lords. He will combine his academic work at Hull with his legislative duties in the House of Lords.

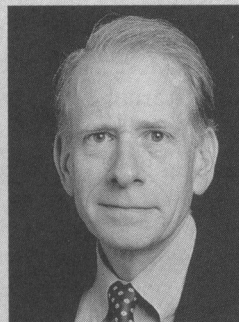

Kathie Stromlie Golden, most recently professor of political science at Morris Brown College, has been named partnerships coordinator for International Development Partnerships Activity for the United Negro College Fund.

James H. Mittelman, on leave from the School of International Service, American University, recently served as Pok Rafeah Chair in International Studies and Distinguished Visiting Professor at the Institute of Malaysian and International Studies of the National University of Malaysia. For 1998–99 he is a member of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University.

Elizabeth Moulds, vice president and chief of staff at California State University, Sacramento, has been appointed executive director of the Western Political Science Association. The long-time secretary of the Association, Moulds assumes the position as the WPSA transitions to a new governance structure.

Allan E. Goodman, formerly executive dean of the School of Foreign Service and professor of international affairs at Georgetown University, has been named president and chief executive officer of the Institute of International Education. Goodman will lead the IIE and its 250 programs of study and training as the international exchange community moves to play a more critical role in the globalization of education. An active and prolific scholar, Goodman is the author of numerous publications, including A Brief History of the Future: The United States in a Changing World.

Barry Bluestone, Stearns Trustee Professor of Political Economy, departments of political science and sociology, Northeastern University; formerly University of Massachusetts, Boston.

Charles Boix, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University; formerly Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona, Spain.

Rupen Cetinyan, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Kelly Chang, assistant professor, department of political science and Robert M. La Follette Institute, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

John S. Duffield, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Kent Eaton, assistant professor of politics and international affairs, Princeton University.

Karl-Orfeo Fioretos, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison (effective fall 1999).

Hawley Fogg-Davis, assistant professor, department of political science, and Anna Julia Cooper Post-Doctoral Fellow, University of Wisconsin, Madison (effective fall 1999).

Julie A. Dolan, assistant professor, department of political science and public administration, Virginia Commonwealth University.

Andrew J. Enterline, assistant professor, department of political science, University of New Mexico.

Paul E. Foley, assistant professor and chair, department of community service/public administration, St. Mary's College (MI).

Douglas Foye, assistant professor of government, Wesleyan University.

Eddie J. Girdner, professor, department of international relations, Istanbul Bilgi University; formerly Eastern Mediterranean University.

Clarissa Rile Hayward, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Diane Heith, assistant professor, department of government and politics, St. John's University.

Virginia Hettinger, assistant professor, department of political science, Indiana University.

Jamie E. Jacobs, assistant professor, department of political science, West Virginia University; formerly University of Florida and University of Pittsburgh.

Richard C. Kearney, professor and chair, department of political science, East Carolina University; formerly director, masters of public administration program, University of Connecticut.

John F. Kelly, assistant professor, department of political science, Oakland University.

Sharon Krause, assistant professor of government, Wesleyan University.

Gallya Lahav, assistant professor of government, Wesleyan University.

David Leheny, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Kathleen M. McGraw, professor, department of political science, Ohio State University; formerly State University of New York, Stony Brook.

Alfred P. Montero, assistant professor, department of political science, Carleton College.

Martin I. Nie, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh, Bradford.

Rosemary O'Leary, professor of public administration, Maxwell School of Citizenship, Syracuse University; formerly Indiana University. O'Leary is currently a senior Fulbright scholar conducting research on environmental policy in Southeast Asia.

Zoe Oxley, assistant professor, department of political science, Union College.

Bradley Palmquist, assistant professor, department of political science, Vanderbilt University; formerly Harvard University.

William D. Richardson, professor and chair, department of political science, and director, W.O. Farber Center for Civic Leadership, University of South Dakota; formerly Georgia State University.

Mark D. Robbins, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Georgia.

Mark J. Rozell, associate director, University of Pennsylvania Washington Semester Program in Washington, DC; formerly associate professor of political science, American University.

Andrew Sabl, assistant professor, department of political science, Vanderbilt University; formerly Williams College.

David Samuels, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Kira Sanbonmatsu, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Vivien A. Schmidt, professor of international relations, Boston University; formerly University of Massachusetts, Boston. During the fall of 1998 she will be on leave at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne, where she will be codirecting a research project on the impact of external economic pressures on the welfare state, thanks to a grant funded by the Volkswagen Foundation.

Karen Stenner, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University.

Patrick Stewart, assistant professor, department of political science, Arkansas State University.

Richard J. Timpone, assistant professor, department of political science, Ohio State University; formerly State University of New York, Stony Brook.

Richard Tucker, instructor, department of political science, Vanderbilt University.

Kenneth D. Ward, assistant professor, department of political science, Southwest Texas State University.

John R. Wright, professor, department of political science, Ohio State University; formerly George Washington University.

Deborah Yashar, assistant professor of politics and international affairs, Princeton University.

Birol Yesilada, professor of political science and international studies, and Endowed Chair of Turkish Political Economy and Trade, Portland State University; formerly University of Missouri, Columbia.

Promotions

Deborah D. Avant, associate professor of political science and international affairs with tenure, George Washington University.

Michael Barnett, professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Neil B. Berch, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, West Virginia University.

Janet M. Box-Steffensmeier, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Ellen Carnaghan, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Saint Louis University.

Ralph G. Carter, professor, department of political science, Texas Christian University.

John J. Coleman, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Markus M.L. Crepaz, associate professor of political science with tenure, University of Georgia.

Christopher J. Deering, professor of political science, George Washington University.

Harvey B. Feigenbaum, professor of political science, George Washington University.

Martha Finnemore, associate professor of political science and international affairs with tenure, George Washington University.

Scott R. Furlong, associate professor with tenure, department of public and environmental affairs, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay.

James M. Goldgeier, associate professor of political science with tenure, George Washington University.

Kathryn Hendley, associate professor of political science with tenure, associate professor of law with tenure, and director, Center for Russia, East Europe, and Central Asia (CREECA), University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Wendy Hunter, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Vanderbilt University.

Jonathan M. Hurwitz, professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

John S. Klemanski, professor of political science, Oakland University.

Forrest Maltzman, associate professor of political science with tenure, George Washington University.

William F.S. Miles, Stotsky Professor of Jewish Historical and Cultural Studies, department of political science, Northeastern University. Miles will be pursuing a project entitled "Third World Views of the Holocaust."

H. Brinton Milward, McClelland Professor of Public Management, School of Public Administration and Policy, University of Arizona.

Thomas E. Nelson, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Leigh A. Payne, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Diana Richards, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

William E. Scheuerman, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh.

Susan K. Sell, associate professor of political science with tenure, George Washington University.

Charles R. Shippan, associate professor, department of political science, University of Iowa.

Kathryn Sikkink, professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota.

Marion Smiley, professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Priscilla L. Southwell, professor and chair, department of political science, University of Oregon.

Kenneth P. Thomas, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Kurt Weyland, associate professor with tenure, department of political science, Vanderbilt University.

Martha T. Zingo, associate professor of political science, Oakland University.

Retirements

Stephen Cohen, professor of politics, Princeton University.

Robert Gilpin, professor of politics and international affairs, Princeton University.

Iliya Harik, professor, department of political science, Indiana University.

Samuel C. Patterson, professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

Bradley M. Richardson, professor, department of political science, Ohio State University.

John Waterbury, professor of politics and international affairs, Princeton University.

Visiting and Temporary Positions

Rory Austin, instructor, department of political science, Vanderbilt University.

Gerald J. Blasi, visiting assistant professor, public policy administration program and department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Stephen M. Caliendo, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Young Whan Kihl, professor of political science, Iowa State University, was research exchange professor at the Sejong Institute, Seoul, South Korea, in 1998. Kihl was also recently granted a Fulbright Senior Lectureship and Research Award for 1999 and will be affiliated with Ewha Woman's University in Seoul.

Tyson King-Meadows, lecturer, department of political science, East Carolina University.

Himadeep Muppidi, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

William Reed, visiting assistant professor, department of political science, State University of New York, Buffalo.

Lyman Tower Sargent, visiting professor, history and social and economic studies, University of East Anglia (UK)

Dieter Umbach, University of Potsdam, will hold the Fulbright Distinguished Chair for German Studies, department of political science, Vanderbilt University during 1998–99.

Awards

Dirksen Congressional Center Awards Research Grants

The Dirksen Congressional Center awarded 15 Congressional Research Grants in 1998 for a total of $30,000. Since the program's inception in 1978, the Center has awarded over $385,000 to support research about Congress. This year's winners were:

David Barrett, Villanova University, "Confronting Democratic Dilemmas: Congressional Oversight of the CIA in the 'Era of Trust'"

Jeffrey Bernstein, Eastern Michigan University, "Using Character-Playing Simulations to Improve Instruction on Congress"

Lawrence Butler, Princeton University, "Getting to 218: Strategies for Building Winning Coalitions in the House of Representatives"

Kristin Campbell, Texas A&M University, "Congressional Elections, the Media, and Public Distrust of Congress"

Christine DeGregorio, American University, "Leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives: Do Parties Matter?"

Stephen Frantzich, U.S. Naval Academy, "Making a Difference: Citizen Courage in a Cynical Age"

James Glaser, Tufts University, "Southern Congressional Candidates and the Washington Outsider Campaign"

Diane Hollern Harvey, George Mason University, "Who Should Govern? Public Preferences for Congressional and Presidential Power"

Byron Hulsey, University of Texas, "Everett Dirksen and the Modern Presidents: Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, and Johnson"

Ira Katznelson and John Lapinski, Columbia University, "Congress and American Political Development: Representation, Party, and Policy before the Civil War"

Stephanie Greco Larson, Dickinson College, "Lauding Leaders and Evaluating Legislators: How ABC's Evening News Celebrates Government Officials through Its 'Person of the Week' and How It Covers Members of Congress"

Forrest Maltzman, George Washington University, "Speaker Cannon and the Committee Assignment Process"

Stephen Millman, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "Impact of the Quality of Members of the U.S. House on Leaving Congress: Implications for Term Limits"

Raymond Tatalovich, Loyola University, Chicago, "Lawmaking During the '100 Days' of 1896–1996: Legislative Fact or Political Fiction"

Fiona Wright, University of Florida, "The Political Implications of Institutional Reform: The 1974 Budget Act and Party Polarization in the U.S. House, 1975–1997."

Policy Studies Organizations Presents Humphrey Award to Dukakis

Michael S. Dukakis, University Distinguished Professor at Northeastern University, was named winner of the Policy Studies Organization's 1998 Hubert H. Humphrey Award. The award recognizes achievements in the field of politics and public service and scholarship and teaching in the policy sciences. For that reason, Dukakis was a natural selection, having worked at the local, state, and national levels in politics and public service, including service as an elected Town Meeting member in Brookline, MA, a state legislator, and an unprecedented three-term governor of Massachusetts. Before joining the faculty at Northeastern, he also taught at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, Florida Atlantic University, and UCLA School of Public Policy. His scholarship and frequent publications have focused on national health care policy reform and compensation and benefits management.

Policy Studies Organization Names 1998 Award Winners

PSO gave the following awards at its annual luncheon, held this year in Boston during the APSA Annual Meeting.

Harold D. Lasswell Award

Duncan MacRae, University of North Carolina, for outstanding scholarship contributing to our understanding of the substance or process of public policy.

Donald Campbell Award

Eugene Bardach, University of California, Berkeley, for being an outstanding methodological innovator in policy studies.

Hubert H. Humphrey Award

Michael Dukakis, Northeastern University, for being an outstanding public policy practitioner.

Theodore Lowi Award

Daniel J. Fiorino, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, for the best article in the Policy Studies Journal in 1997.

Jeffrey Pressman Award

Edward Jennings, University of Kentucky, and Dale Krane, University of Nebraska, Omaha, for the best article in Policy Studies Review in 1997.

Robert Lane Award

Richard Hula, Michigan State University, for outstanding service as PSO president.

JOHN KINGDON

Exercising His Academic Freedom

Define retirement. Chances are your definition is different from most other people's. Granted that, you'd probably find it difficult to disagree with John Kingdon's definition. Upon retiring from the University of Michigan's department of political science this past spring, Kingdon has settled into his Washington, DC home, close to open water and his Catalina 28, Academic Freedom. After six years of commuting between Ann Arbor and Washington, Kingdon looks forward to days of sailing, exploring new novels and perhaps writing one himself. A piano enthusiast in his younger days, he also hopes to direct new energies to playing. He will not miss the Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

A Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and author of several important books and articles, Kingdon will not necessarily let his sailing interfere with research. His latest book, America the Unusual, was recently published by St. Martin's Press and future editions of Congressmen's Voting Decisions and Agendas, Alternatives, and Public Policies have not been ruled out. While off campus, Kingdon is keeping his hand in the profession. He is currently a member of APSA's Trust & Development Committee, continuing a long history of service to the Association that has included stints on the Council, APSR Editorial Board, and Committee on Professional Ethics and Academic Freedom.

Born in Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, Kingdon received his B.A. from Oberlin College in 1962 before entering graduate school at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. Following his graduate training at Wisconsin, Kingdon began and ended his teaching career at Michigan, where he taught courses in American government and legislative processes from 1965 to 1998. While at Michigan, he twice served as department head, held the James Orin Murfin Professorship in Political Science, and worked on enough departmental, school, and university committees to fill an entire page of his c.v. He was named an emeritus professor this past spring. In speaking of UM, Kingdon noted it was the ideal setting for his career with an "intellectual quality that was hard to match."

During his long career Kingdon has also garnered a number of high honors within the profession. A Phi Beta Kappan at Oberlin College, Kingdon served as a John Simon Guggenheim Fellow in 1979–80 and was later selected a Fellow of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences (1987–88). Kingdon also served as president of the Midwest Political Science Association in 1987. In 1994 the APSA Organized Section on Public Policy honored Kingdon with its Aaron Wildavsky Award for his enduring contribution to the study of public policy.

Even though he is retired, Kingdon knows, like Longfellow, that the ship of state sails on. Expect stories of democracy and the sea the next time you see John Kingdon.

Miriam K. Mills Award

Dorothy James, Connecticut College, for being an outstanding young scholar in the field of policy studies.

Aaron Wildavsky Award

Mark Kleiman, University of California, Los Angeles, for the best policy studies book published in 1997.

Don Hadwiger Award

Lynton Caldwell, Indiana University, Robert Bartlett, Purdue University, and Derick Brinkerhoff, Abt Associates, for the best book or journal symposium published in 1997 by PSO.

The Scholars in Health Policy Research Program of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Each year, the Scholars in Health Policy Research Program awards two-year postdoctoral fellowships to up to twelve social scientists. Scholars work with distinguished faculty from three participating universities—the University of California, Berkeley, the University of Michigan, and Yale University—in environments conducive to multidisciplinary learning and collaborative research in the areas of health and health policy research. Among the recipients were:

Daniel Carpenter, Ph.D., political science

Maire Hojnacki, Ph.D., political science

Lynn Sanders, Ph.D., political science

Rogan Kersh, Ph.D., political science

SSRC Names Dissertation Fellowship Winners

The Social Science Research Council recently named 49 fellows in its 1998 International Dissertation Field Research Program. Among those selected for the prestigious award were nine political science graduate students. The purpose of the IDRF program is to enable students of outstanding promise to develop research projects addressing issues of compelling significance that resonate across disciplines and areas.

Jessica Allina-Pisano, Yale University

Andrew Baker, University of Wisconsin, Madison

Caroline Beer, University of New Mexico

Sarah Brooks, Duke University

Melinda Herrold, University of California, Berkeley

Joseph Jupille, University of Washington

Paula Pickering, University of Michigan

Mark Setzler, University of Texas, Austin

Christina Van Wijnbergen, Northwestern University

Women's Caucus for Political Science Announces 1998 Award Winners

At its September 4, 1998 business meeting in Boston, the Women's Caucus for Political Science honored two political scientists and two political science departments for outstanding accomplishments.

The Alice Paul Award

Given annually to recognize the best dissertation topic proposal by a woman in political science, the Alice Paul Award was presented to Deborah Schildkraut of Princeton University for her dissertation proposal, "The English Language and American Identity: Understanding the Language of Policy Preferences of American Citizens." Members of the Selection Committee commended Schildkraut for the sophistication of her multi-method research design, the clarity of her prose, and the importance of her topic. The committee included: Mary Anne Borrelli, chair, Connecticut College; Mary Dietz, University of Minnesota; Cynthia Enloe, Clark University; Amy Mazur, Washington State University; and Peregrine Schwartz-Shea, University of Utah.

Mary Lepper Award

Created to honor a founding member of the Women's Caucus who was a path-breaker for equal opportunity and powerful dreamer who bridged the academic and practitioner realms, the Lepper Award recognizes the important contributions of women whose careers combine academic work with political engagement. The 1998 Mary Lepper Awards was presented to Frances Fox Piven for her sustained commitment to public advocacy on behalf of the oppressed and her untiring effort to use her skills as a political scientist in the cause of social justice to improve the lives of the worst off. Piven is Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the Graduate School and University Center of the City University of New York. Founder of the National Welfare Rights Organization in 1996, Piven is author of number major works, including Regulating the Poor: The Functions of Public Welfare and Poor People's Movements: Why They Succeed, How They Fail.

Women's Caucus Equity Awards

Designed to recognize Ph.D. departments that are making significant contributions to the advancement of women and people of color in the discipline of political science, the 1998 Equity Awards were presented to the graduate programs in political science at New York University and the University of Michigan. The awards recognize these departments for having exceeded national norms in the recruitment and retention of women and students of color.

Other Awards

Henry J. Abraham, James Hart Professor Emeritus of Government and Foreign Affairs, University of Virginia, was one of the first two recipients of the Scholar-in-Residence awards presented at the Deep South Presidential Conference series on "George Washington: Life and Legacy" program at Louisiana State University in Shreveport.

David L. Bartlett, currently an independent consultant, was named winner of the 1998 Edward A. Hewett Prize of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies for his book, The Political Economy of Dual Transformations: Market Reform and Democratization in Hun- gary. The prize is awarded annually for an outstanding publication on the political economy of the centrally planned economies of the former Soviet Union and East/Central Europe and their transnational successors. Bartlett was formerly a member of the Vanderbilt University faculty.

Carl Q. Christol, Distinguished Professor Emeritus of International Law and Political Science, received the Lifetime Achievement Award of the International Astronautical Federation's International Institute of Space Law.

James C. Davies, professor emeritus of political science, University of Oregon, was one of the first two recipients of the Scholar-in-Residence awards presented at the Deep South Presidential Conference series on "George Washington: Life and Legacy" program at Louisiana State University in Shreveport.

Marilyn A. Davis, associate professor of political science, Spelman College, was recently selected for inclusion in the latest edition of Who's Who Among America's Teachers. Who's Who honors 5% of our nation's teachers. Davis was recommended by a former student who felt she had made a difference in her life.

Jodi Dean, professor of political science, Hobart and William Smith Colleges, received the faculty prize for scholarship. She has written three books, most recently Aliens in America, several articles, and appeared at numerous scholarly conventions in the last five years.

Paul F. Diehl, professor of political science, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, has been awarded the 1998 Karl Deutsch Award in International Relations and Peace Research, given by the World Academy of Art and Science and the Peace Science Society for a scholar under the age of forty, or within ten years of the acquisition of his or her doctoral degree, who is judged to have made, through a body of publications, the most significant contribution to the study of

KUDOS

Mary Hawkesworth, a leading scholar of feminist theory and women and politics, was recently named director of the Center for American Women and Politics at the Eagleton Institute of Politics of Rutgers University. Hawkesworth will also join the faculty of the department of political science as a professor of political science.

Hawkesworth is the author of numerous works, maintaining a research agenda that extends from feminist theory to contemporary political philosophy and social policy. Her publications include Beyond Oppression: Feminist Theory and Political Strategy and Theoretical Issues in Policy Analysis. She is also editor of The Encyclopedia of Government and Politics and Feminism and Public Policy. Her work has also appeared in leading journals of feminist scholarship including Signs, Hypatia, Women and Politics, and Journal of Women's History.

In recognition of her work in the field, Hawkesworth has received numerous awards and honors. In 1996, the Kentucky Commission on Women presented her with their Citation for Outstanding Contributions to the Women of Kentucky and in 1997 she was elected president of the Women's Caucus for Political Science of the American Political Science Association.

Hawkesworth joins the faculty at Rutgers from the University of Louisville, where she had taught for nineteen years, including a term as chair of the department of political science, chair of the University's Commission on the Status of Women, and acting chair of the Women's Studies Program. During her tenure at Louisville, she was repeatedly honored for her teaching and outstanding service.

international relations and peace research.

James Farr, professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, was selected as the 1998 Scholar of the College.

Virginia Gray, professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, was the recipient of the 1998 Presidents' Award for Outstanding Service. The award recognizes exceptional service to the University of Minnesota by a faculty member.

Arthur Goldsmith, professor of management, University of Massachusetts, Boston, has been elected Senior Fellow of the John W. McCormack Institute for Public Policy. He also has been appointed faculty associate at the Harvard Institute for International Development.

Stephen Hanson, department of political science, University of Washington, received the 1998 Wayne S. Vucinich Book Prize from the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies for Time and Revolution: Marxism and the Design of Soviet Institutions. The Vucinich Prize is awarded for a distinguished monograph in Russian, Eurasian, and East European studies in any discipline of the humanities.

Charles W. Hartwig, associate professor, department of political science, Arkansas State University, received the Arkansas State University 1997–1998 “Professional Service” award.

Chun-tu Hseuh has received an Honorary Professorship from the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences.

Paul Hutchcroft, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, was awarded a Lilly Teaching Fellowship for the 1998–99 academic year.

Gary Jeffrey Jacobsohn, Third Century Professor of Jurisprudence and Politics, Williams College, has been awarded a Fulbright Research Scholar Grant to work in India from November 1, 1998 to April 1, 1999. His research topic is “Ameliorative Secularism: Religion, Politics, and the Indian Constitution.” He will have affiliations at the Faculty of Law, University of Delhi, and the Center for Political Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University.

Bruce W. Jentleson, professor of political science and director, Washington Center, University of California, Davis, was selected as a 1998–99 senior fellow in the Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace of the U.S. Institute of Peace. He will be on sabbatical from the University of California, and in residence at the U.S. Institute of Peace, in 1999.

Dennis R. Judd, professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis, was awarded the 1997 Chancellor’s Award for Excellence in Research and Creativity at the University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Rita Mae Kelly, dean of social sciences, University of Texas, Dallas, received an honorary doctorate (doctores honoris causa) from the social science faculty at Umeå University in Sweden.

Don Kettl, professor of political science and director of the Robert M. La Follette Institute, University of Wisconsin, Madison, received the 1998 Charles H. Levine Memorial Award of the American Society for Public Administration. The award recognizes a public administration scholar who has demonstrated excellence in teaching, research, and service to the wider community.

James P. Lester, professor of political science at Colorado State University and director of the Policy Studies Institute, has been appointed Fullbright Distinguished Chair in American Studies (Political Science) at Humboldt University in Berlin for 1999–2000.

Timothy J. Lomperis, professor and chair, department of political science, Saint Louis University, was awarded the Alpha Sigma Nu National Jesuit book award for the best book published in the social sciences at a Jesuit institution from 1994–97, and the 1998 Phi Beta Kappa Book Award of the Gamma Chapter of Saint Louis University for the best book published at Saint Louis University for, From People’s War to People’s Rule: Insurgency, Intervention, and the Lessons of Vietnam.

Nicholas P. Lovrich, professor of political science, Washington State University, has been awarded the Claudius O. and Mary W. Johnson Distinguished Professorship in Political Science. Lovrich is author of numerous publications, including five books and nearly one hundred and fifty articles and book chapters.

Peter R. Moody, professor of political science, University of Notre Dame, was awarded a research grant from the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation to address “The Conservative Tendency in Contemporary Chinese Political Thought.”

Daniel N. Nelson, professor of international studies at Old Dominion University and editor of International Politics, has been named visiting scholar at the National Security Education Program for 1999. During 1998, Nelson served as William Foster Fellow in the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Michae Rosano, assistant professor of political science, University of Michigan, Dearborn, received the university’s Distinguished Teaching Award in the nontenured category for 1998.

Mark J. Rozell, School of Public Affairs, American University, won the university’s 1997–1998 Outstanding Scholar Award.

Lyman Tower Sargent, professor, department of political science, University of Missouri, St. Louis, received the first Distinguished Scholar Award given by the Society for Utopian Studies at their 22nd annual meeting.

Richard F. Starr, visiting research professor, Boston University, and associate, Davis Center for Russian Studies, Harvard University, received an honorary doctorate in political science from his alma mater, Dickinson College.

Mildred Schwartz, professor of sociology and political science, University of Illinois, Chicago, has been named the first recipient of the Thomas O. Enders Fellowship. Schwartz will hold the Enders Chair in Canada-U.S. Relations at the Faculty of Social Sciences of the University of Calgary and has been appointed a visiting professor. In addition to her research, she will deliver several lectures. The Thomas O. Enders Fellowship is presented by the Thomas O. Enders Endowment of the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States.

Howard Silver, executive director, Consortium of Social Science Associations, has been named a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Steven S. Smith, professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, was the 1998 recipient of the University of Minnesota’s Distinguished McKnight University Professorship.

Ronald Stockton, professor of political science, University of Michigan, Dearborn, received the university's Distinguished Service Award for 1998. The faculty service award is given annually to "faculty members who apply their professional expertise to benefit the public, and whose work increases the visibility or enhances the reputation of UM-Dearborn."

Frederick M. Wirt, professor of political science, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, has been awarded the Southern Political Science Association's 1997 V.O. Key Award for the best book on southern politics for, We Ain't What We Were (Duke University Press). The award, established in honor of political scientist V.O. Key, recognizes outstanding contributions in the field of American politics with an emphasis or focus on the South.

John Witte, department of political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, has been given the Spencer Foundation Mentor Award in recognition of his research on educational policy.

Michael L. Vasu, and Raymond G. Taylor, Social Science Research and Computing Lab, North Carolina State University, and James F. Causby, superintendent, Johnston County, North Carolina School Systems were declared finalists and cash prize winners for the 1998 Franz Edelman Award for Achievement in Operations Research and Management Services, given by the Institute for Operations Research and Management Services (INFORMS) to recognize outstanding work in operations research that has had a significant impact on the performance of the client organization, for their project "Integrated Planning for School and Community," a mathematical optimization model linked with a land use planning methodology.