Out of Work

The First Century of Unemployment in Massachusetts

Alexander Keyssar

"A work of meticulous and imaginative scholarship, laced with sociological insight. The history of the emergence of unemployment as social phenomenon and as social concept is, quite simply, breathtaking." – Robert K. Merton, Columbia University

"...an extremely important book, which focuses the reader's attention on the experience and fear of unemployment which pervaded working-class life and on the ways working people themselves dealt with it." – David Montgomery, Yale University

Worlds Apart

The Market and the Theater in Anglo-American Thought, 1550-1750

Jean-Christophe Agnew

"This is one of the most important works of intellectual history to appear in years. Agnew makes his careful analysis of a specialized subject yield surprisingly broad and provoking results: anyone reading this book will come away with a deeper understanding of the complex meanings of work and play in modern Western culture. And any intelligent person can indeed read this book, with pleasure. His prose is clear, often elegant: this history is distinguished literature." – Richard Sennett, New York University

Traders, Planters, and Slaves

Market Behavior in Early English America

David W. Galenson

In this book, accounts of the sale of slaves from the Royal African Company's records provide the basis for the economic analysis and quantitative investigation of the determinants of the mortality of slaves on the transatlantic voyage; the conduct of slave auctions in the West Indies; trends over time in slave prices in the American colonies; the demographic composition of the transatlantic slave trade; and the migration of plantation owners away from the West Indies.

The Past is a Foreign Country

David Lowenthal

"A skillful use of art, architecture, literature and the psychology of memory, perception and motivation results in our first comprehensive synthesis of ways in which the past has been seen and manipulated... an innovative contribution to historiography in conception, analysis, and integration of 105 well chosen pictorial illustrations with a lucid and pleasant text. Without doubt, this book is a significant milestone in the history of thought and culture." – Merle Curti, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
