Edmund Spenser

Protestant Poet

ANTHEA HUME

In this fresh reassessment of Spenser's poetry, Dr. Hume seeks to illuminate Spenser's major poems, "The Shepheardes Calendar" and "The Faerie Queene", by placing them in the context of Elizabethan Protestant thought and writings. $34.50

Theatre and Crisis, 1631-1642

MARTIN BUTLER

A thorough reevaluation of the drama written and performed during the decade before the English Civil War. Dr. Butler overturns a number of conventional misconceptions about the nature of the theatrical tradition that was cut short in 1642—that it was exhausted, in retreat, and dependent on the court. $39.50

Poetry and Fable

Studies in Mythological Narrative in Sixteenth Century France

ANN MOSS

An examination of changes of style and vision in the development of poetry in the Renaissance by looking at both how it was read and written. By concentrating on a few specific mythological subjects in vernacular versions of fables from Ovid's Metamorphoses, Dr. Moss is able to identify the salient features in these literary developments and thus to broaden our understanding of the aesthetic revolution which transformed the literature and mentality of France and Western Europe during the Renaissance. $39.50

Elizabethan Stage Conventions and Modern Interpreters

ALAN C. DESSEN

Alan Dessen has examined about four hundred play texts from the age of Shakespeare in order to study the conventions of staging they reveal. Several chapters are devoted to areas where the gap between Elizabethan conventions and our own are most revealing. $29.95

Ben Jonson, Dramatist

ANNE BARTON

By describing in detail the development of Jonson's ideas and his changing relationship to his contemporaries, Anne Barton gives a reading of the plays which completely reevaluates Jonson as a dramatist and brings us closer than ever to him as a man, as a great artist, and as a thinker.

Renaissance Paris

Architecture and Growth
1475–1600

by David Thomson

Only the Louvre, the rebuilt Hôtel Carnavalet, and the Hôtel d'Angoulême appear today as representatives of Paris's contribution to architectural style during the 16th century. The buildings that were erected soon after Francois I decided, in 1528, to make Paris his residence have long since been lost. Thomson restores this fascinating chapter of architectural history in his careful synthesis of documentary and technical sources. Using plans, surveys, and documents from the notarial archives, he plots the history of Parisian domestic design. $37.50 hardcover, $15.95 paperback

Paradiso

The Divine Comedy of Dante Alighieri

A New Verse Translation, with Introduction and Commentary, by Allen Mandelbaum

Illustrations by Barry Moser

Paradiso is the third and final volume of the work that Dante described as having made him "lean for many years," and in this volume, that long leanness, labor, and hunger are at last appeased. Mandelbaum's splendid translation has been called "the English Dante of choice" by Hugh Kenner. Moser's delightful drawings and the facing English and Italian texts create a book as pleasurable to look at as it is to read. $29.95

MILTON'S SPENSER

The Politics of Reading

By MAUREEN QUILLIGAN. The author here examines Spenser's Faerie Queene and Milton's Paradise Lost in an attempt to define the means by which they move their readers, through the power of language, to make ethical and political choices. "Renaissance scholars will appreciate Quilligan's close readings of the great English epics."—Jonathan Culler, Cornell University. $19.50

The Living Lyre in English Verse from Elizabeth through the Restoration

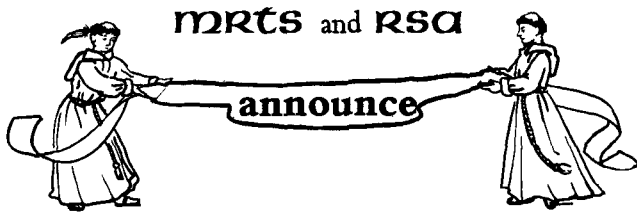

Louise Schleiner. Scholars have claimed that after a close, fruitful interaction during the late sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries, English music and poetry went their separate ways. Schleiner challenges that idea by providing a summary history of interacting stylistic changes in the two arts from about 1580 to 1690 and by giving close readings of representative musically influenced poems by such writers as Herbert, Herrick, Crashaw, Milton, and Cowley.

Captain or Colonel The Soldier in Milton's Life and Art

Robert Thomas Fallon. Recent scholars have seen in Milton's martial imagery skillful efforts to employ irony, satire, and burlesque to parody both warriors and warfare itself. Questioning their argument that Milton was more in sympathy with modern sentiments toward war than with the sentiments of his own time, Fallon discusses the effect of experience on art, an influence largely dismissed in modern criticism.

Collectanea Trapezuntiana

Texts, Bibliographies, and Documents of George of Trebizond

Edited by John Monfasani

As John Monfasani demonstrated in his biography and critical study (which won the John Nicholas Brown Prize of the Medieval Academy), George of Trebizond was a major figure in Italian Renaissance Humanism—translator of Greek philosophy and literary texts, leader in the development of Humanist logic and of rhetoric, biblical scholar and exegete, teacher and polemicist. His voluminous writings and translations are important for a remarkably wide spectrum of fields, including philosophy, theology, patristics, the sciences, Byzantine studies, and the biographies of contemporary figures.

This book is a catalogue raisonné of all George's writings and a critical edition of most of them. Monfasani establishes the bibliography of manuscripts and early editions and provides critical texts of most of the correspondence, orations, opuscula, and scholia. English translations accompany the edited Greek texts. The textual history of the longer works and translations is critically discussed and new textual and historical data are provided.

New Program of Support for Publication

The Renaissance Society of America is pleased to announce a new program of support for scholarly publishing in Renaissance studies.

Members and nonmembers are invited to submit proposals for subsidy of the following categories of publications:

Editions of Renaissance texts of interdisciplinary importance, normally restricted to Latin, Greek, and Hebrew.

English translations of similar texts and documents, particularly from the Latin.

Facsimile editions, with appropriate introductions, of rare Renaissance publications or manuscripts not suited to commercial reprint ventures.

Publications subsidized by the Society would bear on the title page an appropriate acknowledgement stating that the volume is published "in conjunction with The Renaissance Society of America."

Deadlines and Procedures for Submitting Proposals

Deadlines April 8, 1985 and December 9, 1985

Applications

Proposals should contain the following information:

1. Brief account of the publication, its importance for Renaissance studies.
2. Curriculum vitae of the applicant.
3. Budget submitted by a publisher who has agreed to publish the item to be subsidized.
4. Facts of publication—how many copies, how to be distributed, royalty arrangements, editorial services, illustrations, binding, etc.
5. Expected schedule of publication.
6. Amount requested, when payment desired, and specification of how the Renaissance Society might recover some of its outlay.
7. Two confidential reviews of the manuscript obtained by the publisher.

The applications will be reviewed by the Committee on Publications Subsidies. It may request a copy of the manuscript and seek external consultations.
