

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

JORGE F. PEREZ LOPEZ is an international economist with the Bureau of International Labor Affairs at the U.S. Department of Labor. He recently published The Economics of Cuban Sugar (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1991).

DIMITRIS STEVIS, Assistant Professor of Political Science at Colorado State University, has written on international environmental politics and Greek environmental politics. He is currently studying environmental and technology policy in industrializing countries.

STEPHEN P. MUMME is Professor of Political Science at Colorado State University, Fort Collins. His research interests center on environment and natural resources policy in Mexico and along the U.S.-Mexico border. He wrote Apportioning Groundwater beneath the U.S.-Mexico Border, coauthored Statecraft, Domestic Politics, and Foreign Policy Making: The El Chamizal Dispute, and has contributed articles to a wide range of journals.

PAUL GOOTENBERG teaches in the Department of History at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. He has written three books on modern Andean economic and social history, including Between Silver and Guano: Commercial Policy and the State in Postindependence Peru.

LORENZO MORENO, a demographer, is interested in the interrelationship among rapid urbanization, environmental conditions, and health in Latin America. He is also developing a framework for analyzing the consequences of migration to the United States on family formation strategies in sending areas of Mexico. His previous research includes work on the methodological aspects of data collection and analysis of fertility as well as on issues of child health and mortality, with special emphasis on Latin America.

W. GEORGE LOVELL, a member of the Department of Geography at Queen's University Canada, is the author of Conquest and Survival in Colonial Guatemala and Conquista y cambio cultural. A volume he coedited with Noble David Cook, The Secret Judgements of God: Native Peoples and Old World Disease in Colonial Spanish America, was recently published by the University of Oklahoma Press.

PATRICIA SEED is Associate Professor of History at Rice University. She is currently finishing a comparative study of colonial discourse in the sixteenth-century overseas empires of the French, Spanish, Portuguese, English, and Dutch.

JUAN CARLOS KOROL is Professor of Latin American History at the University of Buenos Aires, a research fellow of the Consejo Nacional de Investigaciones Científicas y Técnicas, and a member of PEHESA-CISEA. He and Hilda Sabato coauthored Cómo fue la inmigración irlandesa en la Argentina, published in Buenos Aires by Plus Ultra. His current research centers on Argentine economic history.

JAMES D. COCHRANE is Professor of Political Science at Tulane University. He has written or coauthored more than fifty articles on Latin American politics, international relations, economic integration, and U.S.-Latin American relations. He is the author of The Politics of Regionalism: The Central American Case and coauthor of Political Culture and Foreign Policy in Latin America.

DARIO MORENO is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Florida International University. He is the author of U.S. Policy in Central America: The Endless Debate.

EDWARD RANNEY is Adjunct Professor in the Department of Fine Arts at the University of New Mexico. His 1982 photographic study, Monuments of the Incas, with text by John Hemming, was republished by the University of New Mexico Press in 1990.

BRUCE ERGOOD, Associate Professor of Sociology, has studied and taught in Argentina and Ecuador and led annual student study groups in Belize since 1978. He has published various articles on Belize. Currently serving as president of the Midwest Association of Latin American Studies (MALAS), he previously edited its newsletter, MALAS Noticias.