

A View From Black Mesa

The Changing Face of Archaeology

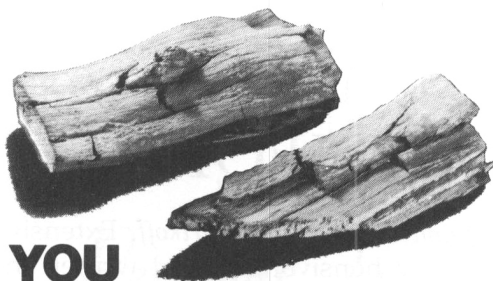

GEORGE J. GUMERMAN

Archaeology's role in modern society is fully demonstrated at Black Mesa, Arizona, where Peabody Coal Company sponsored excavations prior to mining. George Gumerman, formerly head of the Black Mesa Archaeological Project, tells here what it means to be a contract archaeologist today—not only in the field, but in the office, laboratory, and computer room as well. 200 pp., illus. $18.95. October 1984.

Archaeology of Eastern North America

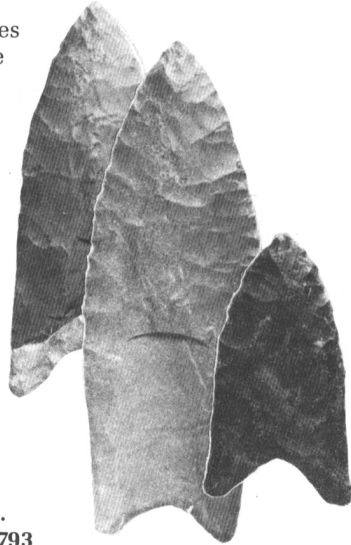

New Experiments upon the Record of Eastern Palaeo-Indian Cultures

Richard Michael Gramly, Editor
Buffalo Museum of Science

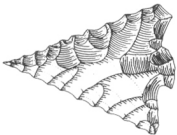

The Eastern States Archaeological Federation celebrates its 50th Anniversary and is pleased to make available a special volume made of a collection of 16 essays with an introduction by Drs. William A. Ritchie and Robert E. Funk, New York State Museum. Fresh data and new radiocarbon dates for eastern North American fluted points and early Archaic cultures. A preliminary analysis of an important Palaeo-Indian cremation deposit. Sites and archaeological reconnaissances in the following areas are discussed: Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Ontario, Michigan, and Ecuador.

The Archaeology of CALIFORNIA

Joseph L. Chartkoff and Kerry Kona Chartkoff. Extensively illustrated, unsurpassed in comprehensiveness, and written in non-technical language for the general reader, this archaeological history provides an introduction to all that is known of the human habitation of what is now the State of California—from earliest known sites to the logging and mining camps of the 19th and 20th centuries. Drawing upon one of the nation's richest archaeological records, it offers brief reconstructions of everyday life, discusses sociological adaptations and diversities of culture, and analyzes the various cultures' economy, technology, and society. Illustrated with 48 maps, 90 photographs, and some 300 drawings. $32.50

MESOAMÉRICA anuncia un número especial:

Harvard El Mirador Project

Recientes proyectos arqueológicos sugieren que el sitio de El Mirador, situado en El Petén, Guatemala, podría ser el más grande y temprano centro de la civilización maya en las tierras bajas. La más reciente de estas investigaciones, el Harvard El Mirador Project (1982), recuperó y analizó materiales domésticos confirmando el desarrollo anticipado de este primer gran foco de la civilización maya en las tierras bajas. Este número especial de Mesoamérica publica los resultados preliminares del proyecto de investigación de Harvard sobre la prehistoria de El Mirador. En sus informes Arthur Demarest, Robert Sharer, William Fowler, Ronald Bishop y otros, describen las excavaciones de plazuelas habitacionales y los análisis que se están realizando de los artefactos recuperados: un primer esbozo de la cronología, asentamiento, cultura material y contactos interregionales del sitio. Estos primeros resultados muestran que la gran escala, la fecha temprana y las relaciones interregionales ampliamente extendidas de este primer gran centro maya, hacen necesario no sólo una revisión de la cronología maya, sino también una reinterpretación de la misma naturaleza de la evolución cultural maya.

Número suelto, US$10.00; suscripción anual, US$16.00; porte adicional a Europa y Asia, US$2.00.

Announcing a New Series

Studies in North American Archaeology

W. Raymond Wood,
General Editor

This series will make available new work in archaeology that is broad in synthesis, implications, and interest—as distinct from conventional site reports. The volumes, investigating topics that are related to Euro-American as well as to historic and prehistoric Native American cultures, may be either primarily theoretical contributions or grounded heavily in original archaeological fieldwork.

Grassland, Forest, and Historical Settlement

An Analysis of Dynamics in Northeast Missouri

By Michael J. O'Brien, with contributions by Jacqueline A. Ferguson, Dennis E. Lewarch, Chad K. McDaniel, William M. Selby, Lynn M. Snyder, and Robert E. Warren

This inaugural volume in the Studies in North American Archaeology presents the results of an analysis of the central Salt River Valley in northeast Missouri between 1818 and 1850. Part of the Cannon Reservoir Human Ecology Project, the archaeological-geographical work covered 65,000 acres that will be inundated on completion of Cannon Dam and was coordinated with archival and documentary research.

American Bottom Archaeology

FAI-270 Site Reports

Edited by Charles J. Bareis and James W. Porter

This projected 21-volume series examines one of the most significant archaeological regions in North America. Cosponsored by the Federal Highway Administration and the Illinois Department of Transportation, the series reports on the excavation of the sites affected by the construction of Interstate Highway 270 on the floodplain of the Mississippi River in Monroe, St. Clair, and Madison counties across the river from St. Louis.

"I cannot recall any publication effort on American archaeology which is as large, comprehensive, and important as this series. . . . Substantially modifies current views of Mississippi Valley and Cahokia prehistory and provides much needed data for all archaeologists of the Eastern United States." — James B. Griffin, Museum of Anthropology, University of Michigan.

Late Maya Settlement Patterns

DAVID A. FREIDEL

JEREMY A. SABLOFF

1984, 232 pp., $31.00/ISBN: 0-12-266980-0

This book presents results of the 1972-1973 Peabody Museum, Harvard University-University of Arizona archaeological project on the island of Cozumel off the east coast of the Yucatan peninsula. The findings break new ground in Maya archaeology, in particular, and archaeological studies of ancient trade in general. This book reports on the important settlement pattern data which the surveys and excavations at some of the more than thirty archaeological sites on Cozumel revealed.

Mortuary Variability

An Archaeological Investigation

JOHN M. O'SHEA

1984, 352 pp., $49.00/ISBN: 0-12-528680-5

FROM THE PREFACE: This study attempts to answer the question, What can funerary remains actually tell us about the organization and workings of past societies?

The present work first consolidates what is known of funerary behavior into a logically consistent archaeological theory of mortuary differentiation, and then considers the reliability of social reconstructions produced by such archaeological analysis.

California Archaeology

MICHAEL J. MORATTO

1984, 736 pp., $68.00/ISBN: 0-12-506180-3 (Cloth)

1984, 736 pp., $32.50/ISBN: 0-12-506182-X (Paper)

This is the first book-length synthesis of the archaeology of California. It covers the entire time span of California prehistory from the first peopling of the New World some 20,000 or so years ago up to the arrival of European explorers and colonists in the Sixteenth Century. Beyond its role as a chronicle, however, this account defines major themes in California's prehistory, explains important cultural events and patterns discovered archaeologically, and shows how California's prehistoric past is relevant to a broader understanding of all human behavior.

Religion and Empire

The Dynamics of Aztec and Inca Expansionism

GEOFFREY W. CONRAD and ARTHUR A. DEMAREST

An innovative and provocative study of the two largest states of the Precolumbian Americas, the Aztec and Inca empires. By examining the causes of the formation and expansion of these two empires, the authors are able to identify the similar patterns and processes that underlay their rise and eventual decline and collapse. They demonstrate that in both cases the crucial elements in the transition from marginal people to imperial power to disintegrating society were changes in traditional religion: in the case of the Aztecs, human sacrifice, and for the Incas, worship of the corpses of their kings. Cloth $49.50 Paper $17.95

Marxist Perspectives in Archaeology

MATTHEW SPRIGGS, Editor

This volume represents a first attempt to gather together current Marxist perspectives in archaeology and to determine whether they indeed represent advances in archaeological theory. Papers have been selected to represent a range of often divergent Marxist perspectives on themes of particular interest to archaeologists. $39.50

Prehistoric Quarries and Lithic Production

JONATHON E. ERICSON and BARBARA A. PURDY, Editors

Drawing upon a wide range of geographical and chronological examples, the papers in this volume develop fresh and innovative approaches to the study of prehistoric quarries, extremely specialized sites which for over a million years provided the essential raw materials for the production of tools, and which present the field archaeologist with complex methodological problems. The contributors show that there are tremendous variations in cultures and social organizations represented by these sites—from the simple societies of wandering peoples in New Hampshire and Maine to the complex state structure of Teotihuacan in Mexico. $39.50

Ideology, Power and Prehistory

DANIEL MILLER and CHRISTOPHER TILLEY, Editors

Starting from the premise that methodology—the procedures for obtaining “objective” knowledge of the past—has always dominated archaeology to the detriment of broader social theory, this book argues that archaeological theory is social theory and that past failure to recognize this has resulted in disembodied archaeological theory and weak disciplinary practice. The contributors show that past peoples, the creators of the archaeological record, should be understood as actively manipulating their material world to represent and misrepresent their own and others’ interests, and that the concepts of ideology and power must play a central role in our understanding of the past as a social creation. $39.50

Ceramic Theory and Cultural Process

DEAN E. ARNOLD

An innovative approach to the archaeological interpretation of ceramics that will significantly extend our understanding of the social, cultural, and environmental processes of ceramic production. Drawing upon the theoretical perspectives of systems theory, cybernetics, and cultural ecology, the author uses cross-cultural comparisons to explain the origins and evolution of the craft of pottery making. He also identifies a series of feedback mechanisms which limit or stimulate the initial production of pottery and its transition from a part-time to a full-time specialized activity. PULLTROUSER SWAMP

Ancient Maya Habitat, Agriculture, and Settlement
in Northern Belize

Edited by B. L. TURNER II and PETER D. HARRISON

The Pulltrouser Swamp team conclusively demonstrates the existence of hydraulic, raised-field agriculture in the Maya lowlands between 150 B.C. and A.D. 850. In verifying the existence of raised fields, the team provides dramatic evidence of a large and probably organized work force engaged in sophisticated and complex agriculture technology.

SPANISH COLONIAL FRONTIER RESEARCH Compiled and Edited by Henry F. Dobyns

The research interests of 11 scholars from several disciplines converge on the Spanish Borderlands of North America. In this collection of 10 essays, the editor has endeavored to bring together works that reflect the kinds of research currently in progress along the northern Spanish Colonial Frontier. A number of historical and archaeological topics are presented and discussed: ranging from St. Augustine to San Diego; from sixteenth century European trade to land grants; from lead glazed Mexican earthenwares to faunal remains and bread ovens. Contributing authors: Mark R. Barnes, Kathleen Deagan, Chester B. DePratter, Henry F. Dobyns, Greta S. Ezell, Paul H. Ezell, Charles H. Fairbanks, Elizabeth J. Reitz, Marvin T. Smith, John R. Van Ness, and Raymond F. Willis.

NAVAJO GRAVES An Archaeological Reflection of Ethnographic Reality By Albert E. Ward

Select Navajo burials from northeastern Arizona and northwestern New Mexico are discussed in terms of a scheme for recording and classifying reservation interments. These individuals, who were interred between the late eighteenth and early twentieth centuries, provide us with valuable insights into past mortuary behavior and serve as examples of ethnographic reality. As such, the archaeological record was often found to be in direct contrast with informant data and/or various ethnographic accounts of what one is supposed to do in given circumstances pertaining to death and burial.

(54 pages; 10 illustrations; 1 table; $6.50 each plus $1.50 postage and handling)

THE NAVAJO INDIANS By Henry F. Dobyns and Robert C. Euler

This book presents one of the most accurate and easily read accounts ever produced about the Navajo Indians. A chronicle that begins with the past, when the land was theirs and they were free of tyranny. Then came the invaders. First it was the other Indian tribes and the Navajo people were successful in their battles, but then came the Anglos and an era of suffering and degradation began. The present covers modern times and offers an insight into how the Navajo people have altered their lifestyles to blend with the white society, while at the same time clinging fiercely to their original customs and beliefs with pride. The future — the final section in this book looks to what many of the Navajo people want in the years to come.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD NOMINATIONS SOLICITED

The Distinguished Service Award established by the Society for American Archaeology is presented annually to a member for specific accomplishments of extraordinary quality. Recognition can be granted in a wide range of areas relating to archaeology including, for example, teaching (academic as well as public education), research (theory, method, application of new technology, analysis, etc.), and conservation of archaeological data (curatorial, legal, managerial), as long as two basic criteria are met. First, the contribution must be truly extraordinary in nature (not expected in the normal course of events) and must be widely recognized as such, and second, it must be of a positive and lasting quality.

The Society is accepting nominations from members for the 1985 Award, which will be presented at its Annual Meeting in May 1985, in Denver, CO. Each recommendation should be supported by a statement documenting concisely and thoroughly the achievements of the nominee. Mail by November 9, 1984, to Dr. John Speth, Chair, DSA Committee, Museum of Anthropology, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI 48109.
