Philosophy for Perspectives on Politics

Perspectives on Politics is a journal of political science that seeks to provide political insight on important problems, as it emerges from rigorous, broad-based research and integrative thought. The editors anticipate authors and readers primarily consisting of political scientists, but also including journalists, policy analysts, public officials and their staff, and other social scientists.

Perspectives enables members of different subfields to speak with one another—and with knowledgeable people outside the discipline—on issues of common interest. Each article must be accessible to and meaningful for readers with much general knowledge of politics but with no specific knowledge of the issue at hand.

The editors aspire to publish contributions that are engaging, illuminating, provocative, and broad-based while retaining the highest standards of scholarly excellence. The editors warmly invite suggestions for articles, symposia, reviews, commentary, and dialogues, as well as other ideas, from political scientists and others concerned with the use of research and careful thinking to address crucial issues and values in the realms of power and politics.

Submission and Review

For submission guidelines, please see the journal's full-length statement of philosophy at www.apsanet.org/perspectives.

Our editorial team discusses all submissions. Those that seem promising are evaluated by several external reviewers—with full confidentiality on both sides—and then accepted, returned for further revisions, or rejected.

About APSA

Founded in 1903, the American Political Science Association is the leading professional organization for the study of political science and serves more than 15,000 members in over 80 countries. With a range of programs and services for individuals, departments, and institutions, APSA brings together political scientists from all fields of inquiry, regions, and occupational endeavors within and outside academe in order to expand awareness and understanding of politics.

The direct advancement of knowledge is at the core of APSA activities. We promote scholarly communication in political science through a variety of initiatives including publishing three distinguished journals: American Political Science Review, Perspectives on Politics, and PS: Political Science and Politics.
