Equal Justice for All: Care of LGBT Youth in the Juvenile Justice System

J. Weiss¹

¹Department of Psychiatry, Columbia University, New York, USA

Children and adolescents who self-identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender experience specific stressors in the juvenile justice system. Clinical and support services for youth who identify as members of sexual orientation and/or gender identity minority populations within child welfare and forensic systems will be reviewed, with particular focus on the comparative example of a North American major municipal context.
