

Language Teaching

The international abstracting journal for language teachers and applied linguists

JULY 1982 SPECIAL FEATURE

J. T. Roberts on ELT (Part II)

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Language Teaching

The international abstracting journal for language teachers and applied linguists

(formerly Language Teaching & Linguistics: Abstracts) now offers

- 20 % greater coverage
- increased emphasis on teaching methods and materials
- comprehensive coverage of the field for its readers in a compact and inexpensive form

Our Readership

- Practising teachers, teacher trainers, applied linguists, students, research workers, writers, educational administrators...in fact everyone concerned with the teaching and learning of foreign languages (including English as a foreign or second language)

Our Aims

- To help people concerned with the teaching and learning of languages keep up to date with the latest findings in research, language studies, applied linguistics and linguistics which are of professional interest
- To pass on information about good practice in classroom teaching and effective language learning, as well as the relevant findings of educational researchers
- To encourage cross-fertilisation of ideas between those concerned with the teaching of different foreign languages (e.g. French, German, English) as well as between practising teachers, applied linguists and educational researchers

What we offer

- Abstracts in English of articles selected by experts from some 400 journals from all parts of the world, as soon as possible after publication
- An original and authoritative article in each issue surveying the current state of the art in an important area of work. Each is up to 7,000 words long, contains a full bibliography and should interest both informed specialists and those looking for an up-to-date introduction to the field
- Short, informative and objective annotations of recent publications, together with a list of books received
- Information on where to find substantial bibliographies on particular topics
- Details of research projects in progress in various countries

How we produce the Abstracts

The editor, members of the editorial board and CILT staff examine some 400 journals taken by the Language Teaching Library and select the most significant articles which

- break new ground
- clarify a problem area
- give a useful review of earlier work
- report important research findings
- present new and useful classroom methods and materials

Most of the abstracts are specially written by the editor and a team of abstractors, who are usually teachers or lecturers in the subjects concerned.

Language Teaching

The international abstracting journal for
language teachers and applied linguists

Editorial Board

Valerie Kinsella, Compiler and Editor

J. L. M. Trim, Director, Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research (CILT)

John Higgins, Consultant, English Language and Literature Division, The British Council

Contents

 Vol. 15, no. 3, July 1982

Preface Page 173

State of the art JOHN T. ROBERTS: Recent developments in ELT (Part II) 174

Abstracts Language learning and teaching – theory and practice 253–316 Theory and principles 195, Psychology of language learning 197, Contrastive/error analysis 199, Testing 200, Course/materials design 202, Teacher training 203, Teaching methods 204

Abstracts Teaching particular languages
317–336 English 220, French 223, German 224, Spanish, 225, Russian 226

Abstracts Research in the supporting sciences
337–377 Linguistic theory 228, Phonetics and phonology, 232, Sociolinguistics
233, Psycholinguistics 236, Pragmatics, 238

Abstracts Language description and use
378–387 Descriptive studies of particular languages: English 243, French 243,
German 245, Japanese 245, Russian 246, Spanish 246

New books 247

Bibliographies 253

Current research in Europe: Federal Republic of Germany 254

List of abstractors 258

Subject and author indexes 259