THE JEWS IN A POLISH PRIVATE TOWN

THE CASE OF OPATÓW IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

Gershon David Hundert

In the eighteenth century more than half of the Jews in the world lived in Poland-Lithuania, and most of the Jews there lived in nobility-owned "private" holdings like the town of Opatów. Drawing on original documents in Polish, Hebrew, and Yiddish, Gershon David Hundert has produced a unique account of the social, demographic, political, and economic realities of life in this community.

RUSSIAN-JEWISH LITERATURE AND IDENTITY

JABOTINSKY, BABEL, GROSSMAN, GALICH, ROZINER, MARKISH

Alice Stone Nakhimovsky

In this thoughtful portrayal of the Russian-Jewish writer at the crossroads of history, literature, and ethnic self-definition, Alice Stone Nakhimovsky explores the ways in which twentieth-century literature written in Russian by writers of Jewish origin reflects the changing problems of Russian-Jewish identity. Though Nakhimovsky makes reference to many writers, she concentrates on six striking individuals: Vladimir Jabotinsky, Isaac Babel, Vasily Grossman, Alexander Galich, Felix Roziner, and David Markish.
