

ISLAMIC HISTORY A.D. 600-750 (A.H. 132)

M. A. SHABAN

A new interpretation of early Islamic history in which the author, describing the establishment of the Islamic regime in Arabia and its sudden expansion into an empire, examines the adjustment of the Arabs to their new environment and analyzes the specific interests and activities of the peoples involved.

"A fascinating, controversial interpretive essay."—Library Journal.
"A new and illuminating perspective of the early years of Islamic history which is of much more general interest than one would suspect."
—The New Middle East $10.50

Also by M. A. Shaban:

THE 'ABBASID REVOLUTION $14.50

WATER RIGHTS AND IRRIGATION PRACTICES IN LAHJ

A Study of the Application of Customary and Shari'ah Law in South-West Arabia

A. M. A. MAKTARI

The first full study of water laws in south-west Arabia, primarily concerned with the laws and customs which govern the ownership and distribution of water resources in the Yemen. Dr. Maktari uses the small, fertile area of Lahj as a characteristic model and describes in detail the system of irrigation and the customary law of water rights and agriculture. His account is documented with previously unpublished case histories, printed in Arabic with English translations. $16.00

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

32 East 57th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022

