BRITISH DOCUMENTS ON THE ORIGINS OF THE WAR 1898—1914

Selected and edited by

G. P. GOOCH, D.Litt., F.B.A.

HAROLD TEMPERLEY, Litt.D., F.B.A.

Volume VI deals with the period of tension between Great Britain and Germany from 1907 to 1912, and the important efforts made by negotiations to relax that tension. The main topics of discussion were the question of the possibility of limiting the increase of naval armaments by mutual agreement between Great Britain and Germany, and the German proposals for a political formula as a preliminary to such limitation. The most serious and definite attempts to solve these problems are to be found in the Bethmann Hollweg proposals of August to December, 1909, the Gwinner-Cassel negotiations of 1909 to 1910 and the long drawn-out discussions culminating in the Haldane Mission of 1912. During the year 1911, the important question of Morocco brought Great Britain and Germany to the verge of war over the crisis of Agadir; but this very serious incident is reserved for full separate treatment in the seventh Volume.

Though many of the incidents related have been the subject of lively discussion in the press in the past, nearly all the documents in the present volume are now published for the first time. Special importance attaches to the minutes and other papers of King Edward whose interest in the development of Anglo-German relations is clearly shown; and the German Emperor's views during the period are reported very fully in many conversations with diplomatic and other representatives.

Volume XI was published in 1926 and dealt with the period 28 June to 4 August 1914. Volumes I and II (1898—1904) were published in 1927, and Volume III, which dealt with "The Testing of the Entente" (1904—1906), in 1928. Volume IV, published in 1929, dealt with "The Anglo-Russian Rapprochement" (1903—1907), and Volume V, published in 1928, with "The Near East" (1903—1909). Volume VI is now ready.
