Excess and the Mean in Early Modern English Literature

Joshua Scodel

This book examines how English writers from the Elizabethan period to the Restoration transformed and contested the ancient ideal of the virtuous mean.

As early modern authors learned at grammar school and university, Aristotle and other classical thinkers praised "golden means" balanced between extremes: courage, for example, as opposed to cowardice or recklessness. By uncovering the enormous variety of English responses to this ethical doctrine, Joshua Scodel revises our understanding of the vital interaction between classical thought and early modern literary culture.

"Scodel's subtlety and erudition make him a superb interpreter of Renaissance literature and culture."—David Norbrook

Morandi's Last Prophecy and the End of Renaissance Politics

Brendan Dooley

One year before Galileo's, another trial was the talk of Rome. The city's most notorious astrologer—Orazio Morandi, abbot of the monastery of Santa Prassede—was brought before the governor's court. His most serious crime was to have predicted the death of Pope Urban VIII. The pope, furious at such effrontery, personally ordered the criminal inquiry that led to Morandi's arrest, trial, and death in prison, probably by assassination.

Based on new evidence, this book chronicles Morandi's fabulous rise and fall against the backdrop of enormous political and cultural turmoil that characterized Italy in the early seventeenth century.

"This is a lovely book.... A rare achievement that will be essential reading for students of early modern intellectual and cultural history for many years to come."

PRINT CULTURE AND MUSIC IN SIXTEENTH-CENTURY VENICE

JANE A. BERNSTEIN

Music printers occupied a unique niche in the 16th century Venetian printing world because their product appealed to and was readable only by those with sophisticated taste. Bernstein bridges the gap between music and other disciplines, showing that the role of a music printer can be discussed as part of larger cultural and economic themes.

Renaissance Society of America Reprint Texts (RSART)

DESIGNED TO KEEP IN PRINT VALUABLE WORKS
FOR YOUR COLLEGE CLASSROOM AND FOR YOUR BOOKSHELF.

How often have you ordered a well tested book for one of your courses on the Renaissance only to be told that the book was "out of print"? The "Renaissance Society of America Reprint Texts" (RSART) series might be exactly the solution for those frustrating cases where a textbook is no longer in print. Sponsored by the RSA and the University of Toronto Press, the RSART series is a series designed to keep in print — or reprint — the most treasured works in Renaissance studies. These can be either texts from the Renaissance itself or "classical" studies on the Renaissance. With a student budget in mind, the books are modestly priced. In the last eight years thirteen volumes have appeared, including Werner Gundersheimer's The Italian Renaissance, Gene Brucker's The Society of Renaissance Florence, and David Chambers' and Brian Pullan's Venice: A Documentary History. Most recently very attractive covers have been designed for these titles. The latest reprint came out just last month. It is Lucien Wolf's Jews in the Canary Islands. If you know of any out-of-print titles you would like considered for the series, please send me an email at eberstein@holycross.edu. We depend on your expertise. I will then contact the holder of the original copyright and start the negotiations. — by Eckhard Bernstein, Publications Chair
