

From Slaves to Squatters

Plantation Labor and Agriculture in Zanzibar and Coastal Kenya, 1890-1925

Frederick Cooper

In his new book, the author of Plantation Slavery on the East Coast of Africa takes up the question of how slaves in the British colonies of Zanzibar and coastal Kenya made the transition to a free labor force, a process that the stark dichotomy between slavery and freedom has obscured. Cooper's study focuses in particular on the ways in which the state, the landlords, and the ex-slaves all sought to redefine economic roles and relationships, and in doing so, it provides important new perspectives on both the history of slavery and the political economy of colonial Africa. $25.00

Class and Economic Change in Kenya

The Making of an African Petite Bourgeoisie, 1905-1970

Gavin Kitching

In this penetrating study, Kitching combines a richly detailed historical analysis of the processes that transformed the political economy of colonial and post-colonial Kenya with a provocative and searching theoretical discussion in which he explores the implications of this analysis from a Marxist perspective. $35.00

The Local Politics of Rural Development

PEASANT AND PARTY-STATE IN ZAMBIA

Michael Bratton

Examines the part played by local-level organizations of the African one-party state in the achievement of goals of rural development. This case study of the Kasama District of Zambia in the 1970's has as its principal theme that rural development in practice arises from interaction between intended strategies and the organized political interests of local leadership groups. A careful account of the grass-roots performance of an African one-party state after a decade of political independence that will be valued by students of Third World rural development.

The Origins of the South African War
Joseph Chamberlain and the Diplomacy of Imperialism 1895-1899

A. N. Porter,
University of London

In a major contribution to the debate surrounding one of the central episodes of South African history, the Anglo-Boer War of 1899, A. N. Porter provides new evidence on and revised interpretations of the events leading to the ultimate breakdown in relations between Britain and South Africa. He remedies the failure of previous studies to recognize the importance to pre-war diplomacy of both the imperial policy-makers' understanding of the domestic political climate and of their sense of South Africa's place in an empire increasingly threatened by foreign rivals, and illuminates the diverse pressures placed on imperial statesmen by the gold-mining magnates, the Uitlanders and the press.

Race Relations in South Africa 1929-1979

edited by Ellen Hellmann,
South African Institute of Race Relations,
and Henry Lever,
Ben Gurion University

Consisting of ten specially-commissioned essays by South African academics and political observers, this book examines the changing racial situation in South Africa over the past fifty years. In their analyses of South African politics, economic developments, urbanization, education, and literary and linguistic trends, the contributors provide an enlightening overview of a half-century of some hopeful progress and much discouraging conflict.

1980 ISBN 0-312-66142-8 about 288 pp., cloth $25.00

The Liberal Dilemma in South Africa

edited by
Pierre L. van den Berghe,
University of Washington

In this timely study, ten South African academics—most of whom now live in Europe and North America—probe the essential dilemma of liberalism in the South African context: how to reconcile a relentless opposition to apartheid (or "separate development") with a profound moral aversion to violence as an instrument of social change.

Nigerian Government and Politics under Military Rule 1966-79

edited by
Oyeleye Oyediran,
University of Ibadan

"Oyeleye Oyediran's edited collection brings together essays by prominent Nigerian political scientists, journalists and civil servants. It is valuable for its informed discussions of topics such as the civil service, local government, foreign policy, the military and the constitution. . . ." —Africa News

The Revolt of the Hereros

Jon M. Bridgman

From 1904 to 1907 the Hereros in German South West Africa fought a heroic but hopeless battle against the Germans. From the standpoint of the Germans the war was trivial, but for the Hereros the war was the greatest historical event they had ever experienced. A timely and important chronicle of a people's struggle for dignity and freedom, this is the story of that war from the Herero point of view. $14.95, illustrated

The Rainbow and the Kings

A History of the Luba Empire to 1891

Thomas Q. Reefe

In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries the Luba Empire was one of the largest dynastic states in Central Africa. Suddenly, in the 1870s and 1880s the Empire collapsed under the impact of European slave trade from both the east and west coast of Africa. This is the first detailed and comprehensive history of the rise and fall of the Luba Empire. $22.00

The Politics of Elite Culture

Explorations in the Dramaturgy of Power in a Modern African Society

Abner Cohen

"This volume rests solidly upon the best available modern research into the political culture of Sierra Leone, and its Creole community in particular, as well as upon thoroughly original field research. . . . There is simply nothing quite like it in the literature of modern African politics."

—Martin Kilson $20.00 cloth, $6.95 paperback
