

THE BRITISH INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW

OBJECTS AND MEMBERSHIP

THE British Institute of International and Comparative Law was founded in 1958 in order to bring together and expand the work of The Society of Comparative Legislation and International Law (founded in 1894) and the Grotius Society (founded in 1915). The Institute provides an international centre for studying the practical application to current problems of public international law, private international law and comparative law (the last mentioned with particular reference to Commonwealth law and the legal problems of the European Communities). The Institute organises a wide range of lecture meetings, seminars and conferences, conducts and promotes research and publishes The International and Comparative Law Quarterly, British Practice in International Law, the Bulletin of Legal Developments, as well as many other books in each of the Institute's fields of interest. Particulars of some of these will be found on the following pages of this issue of the Quarterly.

Membership is worldwide; individual members of the Institute and subscribers to its various publications are to be found at the present time in over ninety different countries. All members are informed regularly of the Institute's activities and research programmes; they are entitled to receive The International and Comparative Law Quarterly, to consult the professional staff of the Institute on legal problems of general interest, to make use, where appropriate, of the Institute's unique Commonwealth Legal Advisory Service, and to use the Barnett Shine Reading Room and Library when in London. A periodic Newsletter on the activities of the Institute is sent free of charge to all members.

The Institute has a Council of Management, of which the Chairman is The Rt. Hon. Lord Denning M.R., and an Advisory Board which is divided into Public International Law, Private International Law and Comparative Law sections. The respective Chairmen of these sections are Sir Gerald Fitzmaurice, G.C.M.G., Q.C., The Rt. Hon. Lord Justice Scarman, C.B.E. and the Rt. Hon. Lord Cross of Chelsea.

The Director of the Institute is Professor K. R. Simmonds, who has special responsibility for activities in the field of public international law. Mr. H. H. Marshall, G.C.M.G., Q.C., is the Deputy Director and has responsibility for Commonwealth Law.

Membership of the Institute is open to individuals, firms and corporations without restriction of nationality for an annual membership fee of £9.50 or $27.50 (including The International and Comparative Law Quarterly). Larger firms and corporations are invited to become "corporate members" at a fee of £52.50 per annum, with advantages regarding receipt of all Institute publications and participation in conferences. Students who are studying law in the United Kingdom, full-time at a University, or for call to the Bar, or for admission as solicitors, may join the Institute at a reduced rate of £5 per annum, and may claim this privilege for up to three years after call or admission but for not more than three years in all.
