CONTRIBUTORS

Anthony Welch is Assistant Professor of English at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. His essays on seventeenth-century English literature have appeared in the journals English Literary Renaissance, Modern Philology and Milton Studies, and he is completing a book about fictions of song and oral performance in Renaissance epic poetry.

Melina Esse is Assistant Professor at the Eastman School of Music. Her work to date has focused on the place of the body in the music and criticism of early nineteenth-century Italian opera. Her research interests also include film sound, melodrama, performance theory and gender studies.

JPE Harper-Scott is a Senior Lecturer in Music at Royal Holloway, University of London. He is the author of two books on Elgar and the co-editor, with Jim Samson, of the textbook An Introduction to Music Studies (Cambridge University Press, 2009). With Julian Rushton he is the editor of Elgar Studies (Cambridge University Press, 2007) and General Editor of the Cambridge University Press book series, 'Music in Context'. Current research interests include the operas of Wagner, Strauss, and Britten, and his next monograph, William Walton and National Modernism is in preparation.

Jonathan Hicks is a doctoral student at New College, University of Oxford with interests in Erik Satie and (sub)urban geography. His doctoral project is concerned with mapping the high/low divide in early-twentieth-century Parisian musical culture.
