

Correspondence

To the Editor of the Journal of British Studies:

Younger colleagues of Professor Gipson have come gallantly to his defence against my remarks on the literary aspects of his work. This I respect. Nor have I any wish to get into unpleasant controversy over so eminent and amiable a gentleman as Professor Gipson. Since literary merits depend in part on subjective judgments, their further discussion would lead to this. As for syntactical and grammatical points, the book is there!

A. R. M. LOWER
Collins Bay, Ontario

August, 1964