Written in the modern idiom and completely practical in content and approach this book should be of great value to young women interested in the religious life, and it is particularly recommended as a book for superiors to give prospective novices.

L'Ascese Chretienne Et L'Homme Contemporain

This work has been produced by the common effort of doctors, psychologists, historians, theologians. It does not pass any judgement on the merits or value of the ascetical practices of the past in so far as the Church has approved them; indeed, history shows that those who have practised them seriously and with prudence have sanctified themselves, but it is nevertheless true that a certain uneasiness has arisen in the minds of Christians seeking perfection concerning the efficacy of certain ascetical practices. This book brings to light the desire to enquire in Christian sincerity whether the ascetism practised by our forebears can always be related to the spiritual needs of modern man and whether it is permissible to envisage a change in the traditional principles of ascetism. Published in French by Les Editions du Cerf.
