Scholars in many disciplines are concerned with the profoundly gendered implications of politics and state development. Using diverse methodologies, current research is examining the role of states in constructing and organizing sexualities and gender relations in families, workplaces and polities, and exploring the gender dimensions of citizenship and social policy across the world. These and related issues constitute the field of social politics – the subject of this journal.

香港城市大學
City University of Hong Kong

Anniversary
十五周年校慶

City University of Hong Kong is a well-established degree-granting institution in Hong Kong directly funded by the Government of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region through the University Grants Committee. It has embarked on an ambitious strategic plan to become one of the leading universities in the Asia-Pacific region by achieving excellence in teaching and research. The student population for 1998-99 is approximately 18,500. The medium of instruction is English.

Currently, there are seventeen academic departments grouped under three Faculties - Faculty of Business, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, and Faculty of Science and Engineering - each being responsible for a full range of research degree, postgraduate and undergraduate degrees programmes.

Applications are invited for the following concurrent headship appointments in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences tenable from 1 August 1999:

(1) Department of Applied Social Studies [Ref. D/394/49A]

The Department of Applied Social Studies provides a thorough education for students preparing for careers in government, the private sector, social service agencies, and para-public organisations. The department has a multidisciplinary team of faculty with a strong commitment to research and teaching. The academic disciplines are Psychology, Sociology, and Social Work. It offers undergraduate degrees in East Asian Studies and Social Work, an internationally recognised diploma in Psychology, and post-graduate research programmes leading to a PhD. It is located within the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences which administers three research centres. It is at the leading edge in surveys and polling, programme evaluation, clinical studies, and gerontological studies.

The successful candidate will head a dynamic young faculty; foster scholarship and research; promote new degree programmes which meet emerging academic and professional needs; collaborate with universities in China; establish linkages with universities internationally; and work constructively with faculty, staff, students, as well as employers to enhance opportunities for research and programme development.

Candidates should possess appropriate academic and professional qualifications in Psychology, Sociology, Social Work or related degrees; an outstanding record of scholarly research and publications; teaching and administrative experience in a university setting.

(2) Department of Public and Social Administration [Ref. D/397/49A]

The Department of Public and Social Administration runs the largest Public and Social Administration honours degree programme in Hong Kong. In addition it offers a MA in Public Policy & Management programme and a BA (Hons) in Housing Studies programme, as well as research degree studies leading to MPhil and PhD awards. The department is committed to the mission to promote good governance and social development. It is a leading centre in education, research and applied work in the fields of comparative public management, comparative policy, China studies, and government & politics.

The Head of Department is expected to provide strong academic leadership in the development of teaching and research in the Department. Candidates should possess strong academic and professional qualification, substantial relevant experience in tertiary education and a successful record of research and scholarship. Apart from being able to demonstrate a clear ability to give leadership in academic governance and management, candidates should also have outstanding scholarship in one or more of the above major fields of the Department.

The University also accepts nominations and reserves the right not to fill these positions.

Salary and Conditions of Service

Successful candidates are expected to be appointed at the professorial level on superannuable terms with provision for retirement benefits, or on fixed-term contract with contract-end gratuity. Salary will be competitive and be commensurate with the appointee's qualifications and experience. Concurrently, the appointees will be offered the headship appointment for an initial term of three years. Generous fringe benefits include 46 days' annual leave, housing, passage allowance and medical and dental care provision.

Application and Information

Further information on the posts and the University is available on the University's World Wide Web home page <http://www.cityu.edu.hk> or the University's listserv accessed by E-mail at "pomail@citylnk.cityu.edu.hk", or from the Human Resources Office, City University of Hong Kong, Tat Chee Avenue, Kowloon, Hong Kong (Fax: (852) 2788 1154 or (852) 2788 9334/E-mail: porecrut@cityu.edu.hk). Please send nomination or application with a current curriculum vitae and the names and addresses of three academic referees at full professorial or other appropriate level to the Human Resources Office by 30 April 1999. Please quote the reference of the post in the application and on the envelope.

Applicants who have responded to the previous advertisements on the post of Professor of Public Management in Department of Public and Social Administration need not re-apply. All applications received will be processed after the closing date.

Streetlife China

Transforming Culture, Rights and Markets

Michael Dutton

This imaginative collection of pieces about life in contemporary China reveals a patchwork picture of the lives of ordinary people and the rules and rituals that govern their daily existence. There will be no better introduction to the discourses of contemporary China, and few more stimulating accounts of shifts in cultural life.

Women and Writing in Modern China

Wendy Larson

A study of the way in which traditional views of women's freedom, and the male gender attributed to literary composition, were reflected in the writings of newly liberated women in twentieth-century China.

Lianda

A Chinese University in War and Revolution

John Israel

Lianda is the story of a university. Its students and staff endured extraordinary difficulties to pursue their vision; Lianda's wartime saga crystallized the experience of a generation of intellectuals, beginning with epic journeys, followed by years of privation and endurance, and concluding with politicization, polarization, and radicalization.

Mighty Opposites

From Dichotomies to Differences in the Comparative Study of China

Longxi Zhang

The author examines the discrepancies between Western representations of China and the reality of China; inquires into the cultural, historical, and political contexts within which such discrepancies arise; and points out the distortion of reality in the tendency to view China as the conceptual opposite of the West.
