

English TODAY™

The international review of the English language

Editor: Tom McArthur, Cambridge

English Today is dedicated to the study of the English language. This indispensable means of international communication is used by at least 700 million people throughout the world. Reflecting this, each issue of English Today discusses the uses (and abuses) of the language, its international varieties, its history, its literatures and linguistics, and its usages and neologisms.

Regular features

- ANGLES OF VISION – opinions and interviews on aspects and attitudes to the language
- KALEIDOSCOPE – examples of and comments on the language at large
- CROSSWORD – ET's cosmopolitan crossword – with leading new publications as prizes
- LEXICON – words and wordbooks from all over the world
- REVIEWS AND DISPLAYS – covering significant new publications on English in particular and language in general
- POST AND MAIL – a broad cross-section of readers' correspondence is published in each issue
- COMMENT – from the Editor
- NEWS – short reports on current happenings
