Gender in the Legal Profession

Fitting or Breaking the Mould

Joan Brockman

The legal profession in Canada and elsewhere traditionally has excluded women, Aboriginals, ethnic and racial minorities, and those from less privileged classes. Joan Brockman discusses why such exclusion has been practised and what its effects have been, particularly for women.

ONLINE AND IN THE RIGHT

CONTROLLING VOICES

Intellectual Property, Humanistic Studies, and the Internet

TyAnna K. Herrington

Foreword by Jay David Bolter

"Compelling and significant, . . . [Herrington] argues that the Internet forces us to examine our practices and ideologies in relation to intellectual property law and asks us to take action to ensure that the balance built into the U.S. Constitution remains in place."—LAURA J. GURAK, author of Persuasion and Privacy in Cyberspace

"Herrington's book should be required reading for academics, especially those in the humanities. The author explains the legal definitions and issues with care and clarity; she demystifies the complexities of constitutional and statutory law concerning copyright and intellectual property. Just as important, she shows how various interest groups seek to manipulate the debate by controlling the legal terms through which the debate is conducted She demonstrates that the problem is too important to be left to the lawyers."—JAY DAVID BOLTER, from the foreword

FREEDOM OF THE AIR AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST

First Amendment Rights in Broadcasting to 1935

Louise M. Benjamin

"Benjamin provides a concise, thorough, and neutrally stanced history of the development of commercial radio broadcasting, with a special emphasis on the legislative history and some discussion of the legal history as well. I see this document as primarily a historical chronicle—a retelling in one place of a complex story."—WARREN SANDMANN, Mankato State University

A unique and definitive study of freedom of expression rights in electronic media from the 1920s through the mid-1930s, Benjamin examines the evolution of free speech rights in early radio, drawing on primary resources from sixteen archives plus contemporary secondary sources. Controversies caused by new technology today continue to rage over virtually the same rights and issues as those Benjamin details.

CONFOUNDED EXPECTATIONS

The Law's Struggle with Personal Responsibility

George W. Jarecke and Nancy K. Plant

A selection of cases across a broad spectrum of American law demonstrates that our society relies inappropriately on the legal system to cure ills the system was not designed to address, questions of personal responsibility. As insightful as it is entertaining, each chapter of Confounded Expectations features one main case to explain one legal theory, with other cases noted as examples of facets of each theory.
