The Pragmatics of Word Order

Typological Dimensions of Verb Initial Change

1990. XIV, 298 pages. With 1 illustration.

Cloth. ISBN 3 11 012207 3

(Empirical Approaches to Language Typology 7)

This monograph focusses on features that are said to correlate with a consistent verb-initial type and the pragmatic factors motivating variation in the basic order of verb, subject and object.

The analysis contributes to a theoretical understanding of the allowable orders of meaningful elements, pressures toward historical change, the pragmatic basis for "headship" in syntactic constructions, and aspects of morphological theory.

The evidence comes primarily from Yagua, the only extant Peba-Yaguan language, which is spoken in lowland Peru in South America. Yagua is shown to be an inconsistent language with regard to traditional typologies of word order.

SYNTACTIC THEORY

A Unified Approach

Robert D Borsley

Lecturer in Linguistics, University College of North Wales, Bangor

This book introduces the theory which is at the heart of most approaches to syntax and considers how it has developed within two broad frameworks: Government Binding Theory and Phrase Structure Grammar.

Recognised internationally for his work in the field, the author takes an innovative approach introducing the two frameworks simultaneously in order to highlight their similarities as well as differences.

An ideal introduction to a complex subject, Syntactic Theory is totally in harmony with current teaching methods. Generous diagrams and exercises are included.

Volume VI: American Indian Languages II

Editor: Victor Golla

1991. 24 x 17 cm. 559 pages. With frontispiece. Cloth DM 280,-
ISBN 3-11-012572-2

Volumes V and VI of The Collected Works of Edwards Sapir are devoted to shorter works on American Indian languages (mainly North American languages), and include some previously unpublished material. The combined index for both volumes is included in Volume VI.

Within these two volumes, the articles are separated into topical divisions and then arranged chronologically within each division. Volume VI contains for the most part papers on the Na-Dene languages, followed by work on Penutian languages. Also included are several articles on the classification of these languages and reviews of these articles by others.

A number of articles dealing with one or more specific American Indian languages have been included in Volumes I through IV, and a listing of these articles is presented in Volume VI, together with the reference to the volume containing the article.

Current English Linguistics in Japan

Editor: Heizo Nakajima

1991. 23 x 15,5 cm. VI, 544 pages. Cloth DM 258,- ISBN 3-11-011781-9
(Trends in Linguistics. State-of-the-Art Reports 16)

This collection of 13 papers provides an introduction to the history of English linguistics in Japan, as well as an overview of recent and current work, primarily on English syntax.

Although much of the work in Japan is based on theories from other countries, and English is often the language of investigation, many Japanese scholars are developing their own theories and approach English quite differently from their non-Japanese colleagues. Thus, the purpose of this volume is to make these approaches known to a wider audience and to make a contribution to the field in general.

Included in the volume are papers dealing with the current theory of generative grammar within the framework called the Relativized X-bar Theory, the VP-internal Hypothesis, the Extended DP Analysis, while others propose new approaches or assume non-generative grammar. A lengthy introduction provides background knowledge of the field.

THE LINGUISTICS ASSOCIATION

The Linguistics Association of Great Britain was founded in 1959 to promote the study of linguistics and to provide for its members both a forum for discussion and facilities for co-operation in furtherance of their interest in linguistics. The Association holds annual spring and autumn meetings, at which original papers are presented in plenary sessions and in workshops devoted to special interests.

Persons interested in linguistics are eligible for election as members, subject to the approval of the Committee. Subscribing members may receive the Journal of Linguistics at a substantial discount. Application forms for membership may be obtained from the Membership Secretary, Dr R. D. Borsley, Dept. of Linguistics, University College of North Wales, Bangor, Gwynedd LL57 2DG.
