DostoevskyEssays and Perspectives

Robert Lord

The majority of essays in this volume approach Dostoevsky from the present day, and together they compose a critical biography of the great Russian writer. They reveal the influence of the political movements and religious thinkers of his time and the way in which their ideas were used in his novels. They are both modest and ambitious, drawing on hitherto unavailable Russian sources, and they reveal interesting insights about Dostoevsky, his art, and the "epileptic mode of being."

Volume 5

California Slavic Studies

Edited by Nicholas V. Riasanovsky and Gleb Struve

Contributors: Samuel H. Baron, Patricia Kennedy Grimsted, Gleb Struve, Charles A. Ruud, Simon Karlinsky, and Sigrid McLaughlin

This current volume treats aspects of Slavic history and literature in six scholarly articles, covering 17th-century Moscow; Czartoryski's foreign policy; the Woronzow, Pembroke, and Nicolay families; censorship under Alexander II; Gogol's fascination with words; and Schopenhauer's influence on Tolstoy.
