

Notes on Contributors

David Hodgson

Judge of Appeal of the Supreme Court of New South Wales. He has written extensively on philosophical topics, especially ethics, reasoning and philosophy of mind. His philosophical writings include two books published by Oxford University Press, Consequences of Utilitarianism (1967) and The Mind Matters (1991), as well as articles in legal and philosophical journals.

Alice Crary

Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the New School University in New York City. She is co-editor of The New Wittgenstein (Routledge, 2000).

Richard K. Scheer

Contributor to various journals including Philosophy and Philosophical Investigations.

Yitzhak Benbaji

A research fellow in the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, and a fellow of the Shalom Hartman Institute. He is author of an unpublished dissertation in Hebrew, Moral Relativism and the Distinction between Internal and External Reasons (The Hebrew University, 2001), and is currently working on papers in the Philosophy of Language and Ethics, and, with Michael Walzer and others, on a project dealing with the Jewish Political Tradition.

Nicola Bourbaki

A part-time philosopher and junior staff officer, currently undergoing training at the Collège Européen des Hautes Études Militaires in Brussels. She is descended from the renowned General Charles Denis Sauter ('Nicolas') Bourbaki who was offered the Greek throne in 1862.

Timothy Chambers

Visiting lecturer in Philosophy at Brown University. He has written articles on time travel, Hilary Putnam, and the Ontological Argument.

Michael Cohen

Lecturer in Philosophy at the University of Wales, Swansea.