Growing Out of Poverty

Edited by Elizabeth Stamp

Throughout the poorer areas of the world small groups of people, with modest assistance from Oxfam and other voluntary agencies, are working hard to make better use of agricultural resources, and so grow more food. The stories of some of these groups are told in this book. Written as vivid personal accounts, they range from making better use of land in the highlands of Guatemala to the search for animal protein in a Cameroon village. Illustrated £4.25 paper covers £1.95

The Financing of Economic Development

W. T. Newlyn

The aim of this book is to consolidate and add to existing knowledge of the financial aspects of economic development. It includes case studies from three south Asian and four African countries. The book fills a gap in university reading lists for courses in developments, and will be intelligible to any reader with a minimal knowledge of economic analysis. £10

University Development in Africa

The Nigerian Experience

V. Chukwuemeka Ike

This personal view of the problems of the emerging Nigerian university is intended to stimulate discussion on university development in Africa generally. £17

Journal of Southern African Studies

This journal aims at generating fresh scholarly inquiry and exposition in the fields of economics, sociology, demography, social anthropology, administration, law, political science, international relations, history, and the natural sciences in so far as they relate to the human condition. The approach is at all times objective – to present material selected on the basis of scholarship and not for any ideological commitment. Twice yearly £6 (US $15) p.a. Single issues £3.50 (US $8).

The Critical Phase in Tanzania, 1945-1968

Nyerere and the Emergence of a Socialist Strategy

CRANFORD PRATT

Professor Pratt traces in detail the political and governmental experiences from 1959 to 1967 which led President Julius Nyerere and his party, the Tanganyika African National Union, to their recommitment to socialism. Close attention is given to the political strategy by which Nyerere hoped to accomplish this socialist transformation.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
