A Comparative Treatise on American International Conflicts Law, including the Law of Admiralty

Sijthoff

Volume III. Special Part: Obligations (Contracts, Torts). An Outline.

by Albert A. EHRENZWEIG, late W.P. Johnson Professor of Law, University of California, Berkeley, and Erik JAYME, Professor of Law, University of Munich

The book joins the two volumes which have been published in 1967 and 1973. It deals with contracts and torts in international conflicts law, the latter subject having been the senior author's main interest. The book was completed after the death of the senior author (1974) by the junior author, now Professor of Law at the University of Munich. As in the previous volumes the authors preserved the original concept of a comparative analysis by using the framework of American international conflicts law. As to contracts, the book discusses the dichotomy of classic conflicts rules and independent and unilaterally imposed statutes with extraterritorial reach. A clear distinction is made between the freely negotiated agreements and adhesion contracts. In torts, however, the modern crisis of conflicts law is seen against the background of accident liabilities which are distinguished from admonitory torts.

"In his typically colorful fashion, Albert Ehrenzweig renews a fruitful debate about the proper goals of conflicts analysis. In doing so he has here made a superbly useful contribution to legal scholarship. These books are recommended for all libraries with substantial comparative or international law collections."
