EU Human Rights Policies

A Study in Irony
ANDREW WILLIAMS

The EU's human rights policies are plagued by double standards: it applies radically different approaches in its external and internal operations. In this book, Andrew Williams reveals the nature and scope of this bifurcation and the resultant discrimination, and argues that the ironical condition revealed undermines both the EU's commitment to human rights and its moral credibility.

Procedural Law in International Arbitration

GEORGIOS PETROCHILOS

This book comprehensively analyses the relevant legislative practice of all major arbitration venues in the world, as well as the arbitral practice of a number of arbitral institutions. The book proposes an analytical model for the determination of the procedural law of international arbitration, as well as a number of 'model' legislative provisions of substantive and private international law.

International Law Immunities and the International Criminal Court Dapo Akande 407

This article considers the types of immunity available to state officials and their applicability in national and international prosecutions for international crimes. The author analyzes the tensions between the provisions of the ICC Statute dealing with immunity and argues that while the immunities of officials of nonparties remain unaffected by the Statute, ICC parties have accepted obligations going beyond customary law in relation to their own officials.

Compliance with Final Judgments of the International Court of Justice Since 1987 Colter Paulson 434

This examination of the recent final judgments of the International Court of Justice assesses the degree of compliance attained and the factors that influence it. All of the judgments have met with a high degree of deference and significant efforts toward compliance, and most have won full compliance, including resolution of the underlying dispute.

Justiciability of Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights: Should There Be an International Complaints Mechanism to Adjudicate the Rights to Food, Water, Housing, and Health? Michael J. Dennis and David P. Stewart 462

The proposal to establish a new individual-complaints mechanism under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights raises important issues about justiciability. The authors explore the negotiating history of the Covenant as well as an array of practical challenges to, and constraints upon, the proposed mechanism, asking how it would function, on what legal basis, and to what practical benefit.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

The American Society of International Law was organized in 1906 "to foster the study of international law and to promote the establishment and maintenance of international relations on the basis of law and justice." Society membership is open to all persons of any nationality and profession who are interested in its objectives. Dues are: regular, $165; special category, $110; new professional, $85; retired, $110; student, $30. Sustaining Memberships—contributing ($275) and patrons ($10,000)—are also available. Corporations may join ASIL as institutional members ($2,000). The Society is incorporated by Act of Congress approved September 20, 1950 (64 Stat. 869).
