COLONIAL ORIGINS OF THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION

A Study in Legal and Social History and Philosophy

Edited and with an Introductory Essay by Donald S. Lutz

Local government in colonial America was the "seedbed of American constitutionalism." So begins the introductory essay to this landmark collection of eighty documents created by the American colonists—and not English officials—that are the genesis of American fundamental law and constitutionalism. Most of these documents, commencing with Agreement of the Settlers at Exeter in New Hampshire, July 5, 1639, and concluding with Joseph Galloway's Plan of Union, 1774—"the immediate precursor to the Articles of Confederation"—have never before been accessible to the general reader or in a single volume. As Professor Lutz points out, the documents are chosen to make possible "a careful examination of [the American] people's attempt at self-interpretation." All of the principal colonial documents are included, as are all documents attempting to unite the colonies, beginning with The New England Confederation of 1643. Bicameralism, popular sovereignty, the separation of powers, checks and balances, limited government, and religious freedom—in sum, the hallmarks of American constitutionalism—were first presented to the world in these writings.

Donald S. Lutz is Professor of Political Science at the University of Houston.

ERASMUS INSTITUTE

RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS

The Erasmus Institute introduces its 1999-2000 residential fellowships at its center on the campus of the University of Notre Dame. These include senior/junior faculty, postdoctoral, and dissertation fellowships, both stipendiary and non-stipendiary, for one or two semesters. Applications are due February 1, 1999.

The institute fosters first-order research (not policy-oriented or applied) grounded in Catholic intellectual traditions and focused on current problems in the humanities and social sciences. Examples include scholarship on just-war theory in political science, conceptions of authority in sociology, theories of human behavior underlying psychological research, or historical studies of religious sources of apparently secular modes of thinking. The institute also supports research deriving from other Christian intellectual traditions as well as from Jewish and Islamic ones. It invites the participation of scholars without regard to religious belief.
