Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from scholars, including postgraduate students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted in quadruplicate to the editorial office. They should normally not exceed 8,000 words in length; should be typed in double spacing, with footnotes at the end; and should conform to the styling of The China Quarterly (see below). An abstract of 100–150 words should also be provided for on-line promotional purposes. Submission of a manuscript is taken to imply that it has not previously been published in any form (including non-copyrighted working papers) and that it is not currently being considered elsewhere.

The China Quarterly is published by Oxford University Press on behalf of the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the School.

Style

Romanization

Chinese characters should be provided on the first occurrence of each romanization, to assist in proofreading.

Democratization in China and Taiwan

THE ADAPTABILITY OF LENINIST PARTIES

BRUCE J. DICKSON

What are the prospects for China's democratization? Does Taiwan's political development hold insights for China's future evolution? This timely book describes the efforts of party leaders in China and Taiwan to adapt their parties to the new challenges that confront them, including demands from their societies for more political reform. It offers a new perspective on Taiwan's democratization and fresh insights into the extent of political reform in post-Mao China.

Strong Institutions in Weak Polities

STATE BUILDING IN REPUBLICAN CHINA, 1927-1940

JULIA C. STRAUSS

This work explores state building and the processes by which supporting state bureaucratic organizations aided the state building effort in Republican China between 1927 and 1940. It suggests that, in hostile environments profoundly non-congenial to state building efforts, it is the state organizations that stand the best chance of becoming well institutionalized. This work details the administrative histories and institution-building strategies of three organizations in Republican China dealing with the national civil service, taxation, and foreign affairs.

Centre and Provinces: China 1978-93

POWER AS NON-ZERO-SUM

LINDA CHELAN LI

This book constructs an interactive model of power to explain the relations of the central and provincial governments in reform China. Power in a context of interdependence flows from both sides. Unlike most previous analyses, Centre and Provinces: China 1978-93 argues that provincial non-compliance is partly the product of central policy as well as provincial choice. An adequate understanding of change requires full recognition of this mutuality of power and its manifestations. Compromises are struck amidst protracted conflicts and interdependence, resulting in a more institutionalized form of relations.

Propaganda and Culture in Mao's China

DENG TUO AND THE INTELLIGENTSIA

TIMOTHY CHEEK

This is a social biography of Deng Tuo (1912-66), journalist, editor, and theorist, who is variously seen as a dissident and a propagandist for Mao. Its broader purpose is to re-examine the role of intellectuals in China's communist revolution.
