ROCKEFELLER FELLOWSHIPS

The Rice University Center for Cultural Studies will be offering two residential postdoctoral Rockefeller Fellowships for Asian and African Studies in each of the 1990-91 and 1991-92 academic years. The Center for Cultural Studies brings together faculty in the humanities and social sciences at Rice to study issues of broad intercultural and interdisciplinary concern. Its goal is to further understanding by providing a forum for the juxtaposition of historical traditions, cultural perspectives, and alternate accounts of reality registered in philosophy, technology, history, literature, the arts, ethnography and social theory.

Residential Fellows will pursue their own research at the Center and will be expected to participate in Center seminars appropriate to their interests. Fellows for the 1991-92 academic year will be selected for (a) excellence of scholarship and (b) interest in cross-cultural and inter-disciplinary discussions. Applicants need not be working on explicitly comparative projects, but must be willing to make their work accessible to scholars working on other cultures and in other disciplines, and interested in exploring its wider implications and its relevance to the presuppositions of Western civilization. Applicants are encouraged to seek other grants or sabbatical support for their tenure, though this is not required. Fellows will be in residence for six to nine months between August 1991 and May 1992; maximum stipend is normally $30,000. Please submit a current curriculum vitae, a two-page single-spaced description of your research project, and three letters of recommendation to: Rockefeller Fellowships, c/o Allen Matusow, Dean of Humanities, Rice University, Box 1892, Houston, Texas 77251. Deadline is December 10, 1990.

Further questions may be addressed to Linda Quaidy, Administrative Assistant to the Dean of Humanities, (713) 527-4810.

Black Christians and White Missionaries

Richard Gray

In this book Richard Gray examines the transformation of African Christianity from its first appropriations in the seventeenth century to the present day. Drawing on a wide selection of sources including the Vatican archives and other scholarly writings, Gray interweaves issues such as the relationship between the Papacy and Central Africa, and the emergence of the modern missionary movement and its relationship with colonial rule, around a principal theme: the interaction of missionary teaching with African concerns, intents and fears.

FRANK CASS

THE JOURNAL OF PEASANT STUDIES

Although more than half the world's population is still composed of peasants it is only recently that peasant studies has emerged as a distinct multi-disciplinary field of study where economists, historians, anthropologists, political scientists, sociologists and others can learn from each other's work within a framework of common interest. The Journal of Peasant Studies provides a forum and focus for this rapidly-growing interest, based on the premise that studying the peasantries within the broader systems and historical situations in which they exist is the only way to achieve a true understanding of the role of peasants in political, economic and social change.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

The Journal publishes research and reviews on all aspects of the African past. Contributors should keep in mind the general readership for whom they are writing and relate their findings specifically to relevant secondary literature.

Contributions may be sent to any of the Editors listed on the inside cover; they should be addressed to them at their Departments of History.

Authors may submit contributions in either English or French. They should not exceed about 6000 words (excluding notes), except with the prior approval of the Editors. Where appropriate, carefully drawn maps, photographs, and other illustrations should accompany the text. A summary of the contents of the article, not exceeding about 300 words, should be attached on a separate sheet.

Contributors should seek clarity, brevity, and simplicity of expression and avoid long sentences and unduly lengthy or short paragraphs. They should closely observe the conventions set out below ('Format and Style').

Typescripts or print-outs must be checked personally before despatch, to remove accidental errors.

Page proofs will be sent to each contributor, if necessary by air mail. Corrections must be kept to a minimum: they should not include new material. Contributors should be prepared to return corrected proofs promptly. Authors of articles and review articles receive 25 free offprints and may purchase additional copies, provided that they order before publication on the form sent out with proofs.

Format and Style

Articles should be submitted in two copies. They should be typed in double-spacing throughout. Lines beginning new paragraphs should be indented. Ample margins (at least one inch left and right, one and one-half inches top and bottom) must be left, and all pages should be numbered.

Spelling (in English) may follow either British or American convention but must be consistent. African words and names should conform to the orthography of the International African Institute. In referring to people, Bantu prefixes should normally be omitted: thus 'Luganda', 'Buganda', but 'a Ganda', 'the Ganda'.

Quotations of more than forty words or so should begin on a new line, indented from the left-hand margin.

Italics should be used only for the names of publications and for words in languages other than English. Foreign words should be used only when necessary, and then only with a translation in parentheses.

Figures should be used for units of measurement, percentages (to be shown in the form '7 per cent', not '7%'), and any number which includes a decimal point. Spell out other numbers up to ten and multiples of ten up to one hundred ('seven', 'twenty', but '25', '127', and '10,000'). Cite dates in the form '12 February 1968' (or 'Feb.' in source-references). Express sequences in the briefest form possible ('68-9', but '1911-12', '1849-50').

Notes should be numbered consecutively throughout the article and typed double-spaced, separately from the text. Citations of references should be made only in the notes and not in the text, and there should be no separate bibliography. First references should be given in full, thus: S. Johnson, The History of the Yorubas (Lagos, 1921); E. W. Smith, 'Sebetwane and the Makololo', African Studies, xv (1956), 49-74. All subsequent references should be given in abbreviated form, thus: Johnson, History, 43; Smith, 'Sebetwane', 65 except that ibid. should be used to refer to an immediately preceding citation of a title. Loc. cit. and op. cit. should not be used. Use abbreviations of periodical titles where these are reasonably familiar (e.g. J. Afr. Hist.). Archival citations should be as brief as is consistent with clarity. The identity and location of each archive must be fully spelled out where it is first cited.

Maps should be prepared where the topography is important for an understanding of the text. Maps should if possible be camera-ready and show all relevant information, but only such information as is mentioned in the text. Photographs should specifically enhance the text and carry full captions and attributions.
