

Chairman: A.H. Dodson

A.H. Dodson: (introduction)

This last session means really a slight movement away from what we have been talking about during the rest of the meeting. We are coming down to much smaller scale measurements. In the paper I am going to present as an introduction to the workshop, you may notice already existing successful attempts in engineering surveys to study local dynamics with high precision. I shall mainly talk about studies of dam deformations in England.