

Rafael Núñez and the Politics of Colombian Regionalism, 1863–1886

James William Park

This study provides the most solid analysis available in English of the most important figure in late nineteenth-century Colombia. James William Park charts Rafael Núñez' rise to prominence as a determined nationalist and his efforts to lay the groundwork necessary for Colombia's political stability and economic development. $35.00

CENTRAL AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN

The U.S. State Department's "confidential" diplomatic post files from Central America and the Caribbean for the period from 1930 onward have never been published in any format until now. As the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting from the region, the records in these files are the very best primary sources for the study of the long-term development of U.S. policy toward Central America and the Caribbean and, even more significantly, for the study of the complex mix of social, economic, and political factors that has shaped the current conditions of the region. Therefore, the fact that over 200,000 pages of these records are being published for the first time is important news for professors and students with interests either in the history of U.S. foreign relations or in the history of Central America and the Caribbean. The diplomatic post files from Cuba, Honduras, El Salvador, and Nicaragua form the first installments in what will be an ongoing project to publish the records of key State Department posts throughout Latin America.

In most timely fashion University Publications of America now is offering to Latin American scholars the first published accounts of the Confidential U.S. Diplomatic Post Records for Cuba, Honduras, El Salvador, and Nicaragua. No research library can function properly without them, and Central Americanists in particular are going to wish that they could afford them for their own libraries. The files, numbering tens of thousands of pages, are available for the years 1930-1945 and are of the same high quality as UPA's earlier microfilm. Each nation's records contain a useful index and a helpful guide.

The Politics of the Miraculous in Peru

Haya de la Torre and the Spiritualist Tradition

By Fredrick B. Pike

One of the most charismatic leaders Latin America has produced, Víctor Raúl Haya de la Torre introduced his visionary faith and esoteric beliefs into his political movement, the APRA, which has played a major role in Peruvian politics for more than 50 years. This wide-ranging intellectual biography traces in fascinating detail Haya's transformation from a megalomaniac prophet of a cult of the miraculous to a masterful strategist of conciliatory politics and responsible statesmanship. Counterrevolution in Argentina, 1900–1932

The Argentine Patriotic League

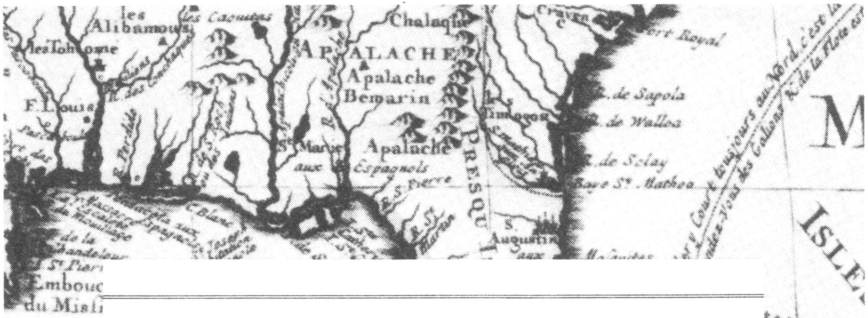

By Sandra McGee Deutsch

Since the birth of fascism in Europe, the seemingly irrational appeal of counter-revolutionary movements has intrigued observers. In Latin America, Argentina is noted for its long history of strong counterrevolutionary organizations. By tracing the development of the first significant and long-lasting far-right group, the Argentine Patriotic League, Deutsch examines the conditions and motives that gave rise to Argentina's counterrevolutionary movement. The Florida Situado:
Quantifying the First Eighty Years, 1571-1651

By Engel Sluiter,

Professor of History Emeritus,
University of California, Berkeley

This monograph is the first systematic study of the annual royal subsidy (situado) paid to Spanish Florida. It is based upon extensive research among the surviving accounts of the Vera Cruz and Mexico City treasuries, and on the correspondence between their treasury officials and the crown, which are preserved in the Archives of the Indies in Seville. The publication consists of a narrative text with accompanying notes, together with an explanatory table and notes detailing the various subsidy payments. This work, which significantly alters the historiography of Spanish Florida, will be of interest to historians, archaeologists, and ethnographers of the Spanish Borderlands and the Caribbean.

The Florida Situado is available at U.S. $25.00 per copy plus $1.00 handling and postage. All checks should be made payable in U.S. dollars drawn on a U.S. bank to the University of Florida Foundation, Inc. and orders should be mailed to the following address:

The Cambridge History of Latin America

Edited by Leslie Bethell

Volume III: From Independence to c. 1870

This volume opens with a survey of the revolutions and wars of independence in Spanish America and the relatively peaceful transition to independence in Brazil during the first quarter of the nineteenth century. Part Two is devoted to the Caribbean, with chapters on Haiti, Santo Domingo, and Cuba. The core of the volume examines the history of Latin America during the first half-century after independence.

945 pp. $80.00

Volume IV: c. 1870 to 1930

Consists of twelve essays on subjects including: the growth of the Latin American economies as a result of their integration into the international economy; relations with the European powers and the U.S.; population growth; the beginnings of industrial growth in the major republics; the emergence of an urban working class and early labor movements; political and social ideas, movements in literature, art, and music; and the role of the Catholic church.

c. 700 pp. About $75.00

Volume V: c. 1870 to 1930

Consists of the separate histories of the individual countries of Latin America: Mexico, Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, Venezuela, and Brazil.

The Caribbean Slave

A Biological History

Kenneth F. Kiple

The second volume of a projected trilogy on the biological history of the black in the Americas, this book focuses on the black biological experience in slavery from the sixteenth to the late-nineteenth century. Professor Kiple begins by examining the rapidly changing disease environment in the Caribbean following the fifteenth-century arrival of the Spaniards, who brought with them diseases that quickly caused annihilation among the Indians, creating an acute labor shortage.

THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

Politics and Development in an Unsovereign State
Jan Knippers Black, University of New Mexico

This timely work offers a general introduction to the Dominican Republic and places the nation's current economic and political crisis in perspective. The text begins with a comprehensive overview of the nation's history, social and economic structures, political institutions and international ties. It then addresses the political tension generated by the contradictory demands of the country's own impoverished population and of representatives of U.S. political, military and economic interests. POPULATION GROWTH IN LATIN AMERICA AND U.S. NATIONAL SECURITY

Edited by John Saunders, Mississippi State University

If current growth rates of Latin American populations remain unchanged, it is probable that by the year 2001, North Americans will be outnumbered by approximately two to one in the Western Hemisphere. In light of this fact, the contributors to this volume deal with both population growth in Latin America and the possible consequences for the future security of the United States. WELFARE POLITICS IN MEXICO

Papering Over the Cracks
Peter M. Ward, Cambridge University

The analysis of social welfare provision in developing countries is an emerging field of major importance in development studies. Professor Ward's new work makes a major contribution to this area. Using Mexico as his case study, he analyzes three substantive welfare areas: land (for self help housing), urban infrastructure, and health. He examines the motives behind increasing government intervention in these areas, and evaluates the effects of government policies upon the poor. April 160pp. illustrations HB $24.95 0-04-361058-7

Intellectuals and the State in Twentieth-Century Mexico

By RODERIC A. CAMP

Camp's rigorous examination of intellectuals in Mexico is the first study of a Latin American country to detail the structure of intellectual life rather than merely considering intellectual ideas. Using original sources, including extensive interviews, the author provides new data about and an interpretation of the evolution of leading Mexican intellectuals and their relationship to politics and politicians since 1920.

The Mexican American Experience AN INTERDISCIPLINARY ANTHOLOGY

Edited by RODOLFO O. DE LA GARZA, FRANK D. BEAN, CHARLES M. BONJEAN, RICARDO ROMO, and RODOLFO ALVAREZ.

A timely and authoritative anthology, this book contains articles recently published in Social Science Quarterly. It examines in depth the social, historical, economic, and political experiences of the large and complex Mexican-origin population in the United States and addresses such aspects as political struggles, school desegregation, language patterns, self-identity, and labor problems. The book is an ideal classroom text.

NICARAGUA: An Inside Look

WHO ARE THE SANDINISTAS? How did they come to power? How are they reshaping Nicaraguan life? What positions have Christians taken toward the revolution, and where have these positions led?

Humberto Belli, a native Nicaraguan, lawyer and sociologist, is eminently qualified to take on these controversial questions. An active member of the Sandinista front until 1975, he was later editorial page editor of the independent newspaper La Prensa.

In Breaking Faith, Belli's analysis begins with a small band of Marxist guerrillas whose stormy history he traces through the civil war that brought them to power. Next, he considers the course of the Sandinista government and its impact on democratic freedoms and religious liberty in Nicaragua. Finally, Belli discusses the role of Christians in the revolutionary process and the striking consequences of a Marxist-Christian alliance.

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

JONATHAN C. BROWN began as an economic historian, studying Argentina's economic expansion in the nineteenth century. His interest in development questions led to his current research on foreign oil companies in Mexico. The complexity of Latin America's relationship with multinational enterprise, however, has caused him to consider the nature of politics and the formation of the industrial proletariat in the region.

LAUREN A. BENTON is an anthropologist and historian who specializes in urban studies and comparative economic development. Her most recent research concerns the growth of the informal sector and industrial change in semiperipheral countries.

PATRICIA A. WILSON is Associate Professor of Community and Regional Planning in the School of Architecture at the University of Texas. She directs the Joint Master's Program in Planning and Latin American Studies.

CAROL WISE, a doctoral candidate in political science at Columbia University, is writing a dissertation on the public sector in Peru. She is currently a visiting researcher at the Instituto de Estudios Peruanos in Lima.

NANCY E. MORRIS recently completed a master's degree in Latin American Studies at the University of New Mexico and plans to pursue a Ph.D. in mass communication. Her research interests include Latin American popular culture and cultural policies as well as mass media and international communication. She has made several trips to Chile to do research on the New Song movement.

SUSAN BERGLUND is Assistant Professor of History at the Universidad Central de Venezuela and serves as a consultant for the Fundación John Boulton. She has published on immigration in Venezuela and is currently researching nineteenth-century mercantile activities.

CARL VAN NESS is a graduate student in history at the University of Florida. Employed as an archivist with the University of Florida Archives, he has worked extensively with the Braga Brothers Collection.

PETER RANIS is Professor of Political Science at York College, City University of New York, and Adjunct Professor of Politics at the Center for Ibero-American Studies at New York University. He is currently engaged in research on the Argentine working class under changing political regimes.

PAUL W. DRAKE holds the Institute of the Americas Chair for Inter-American Affairs in the Department of Political Science at the University of California at San Diego. He also directs the Center for Iberian and Latin American Studies.

IAN ROXBOROUGH lectures on the political sociology of Latin America at the London School of Economics and the Institute of Latin American Studies at the University of London. His most recent book is Unions and Politics in Mexico: The Case of the Automobile Industry. His current research centers on Brazilian industrial relations.

JOHN FREDERICK SCHWALLER is Associate Professor in the Departments of History and Languages and Linguistics at Florida Atlantic University. He recently published The Origins of Church Wealth in Mexico. As a Tinker Foundation Fellow, he is currently studying Don Luis de Velasco the younger.

WERNER BAER is Professor of Economics at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he specializes in Latin American economic problems. The second edition of his The Brazilian Economy: Growth and Development was recently published by Praeger.

ELIZABETH G. FERRIS currently directs research and writing on refugee issues at the World Council of Churches in Geneva, Switzerland. She has written extensively on Latin American foreign policy and on refugees. Most recently, she edited Refugees and World Politics and coauthored The Dynamics of Latin American Foreign Policies with Jennie K. Lincoln.

EDNA ACOSTA-BELEN is Associate Professor in the Department of Puerto Rican, Latin American, and Caribbean Studies as well as in the Department of Hispanic and Italian Studies at the State University of New York at Albany. She has published extensively on Latin American and Caribbean literature, linguistics, and ethnic studies. She edited The Puerto Rican Woman and La mujer en la sociedad puertorriqueña.

PRUDENCE M. RICE is Associate Professor of Anthropology at the University of Florida and Associate Curator of Archaeology at the Florida State Museum. Her research interests, which include historical ecology and analyses of pottery and obsidian artifacts, are being pursued through field and laboratory work on material from Guatemala, Belize, Peru, and Florida.

GERHARD DREKONJA-KORNAT spent many years in Latin America. At present, he lectures at the University of Vienna, edits the Zeitschrift für Lateinamerika Wien, and heads the Ludwig-Boltzmann-Institut für Lateinamerika-Forschung.

CARLOS H. WAISMAN is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of California, San Diego. He wrote Modernization and the Working Class: The Politics of Legitimacy and The Question of Revolution and the Underdevelopment of Argentina (forthcoming). He is currently working on social and political change in Argentina in the 1960s and 1970s.
