New Studies in Practical Philosophy

a new series designed to give students an understanding of contemporary analytical philosophy, particularly in the logic of moral discourse and the practical problems of morality. Edited by W. D. Hudson, Reader in Philosophy at the University of Exeter, it will also explore the relationship between morality and other 'universes of Discourse' such as art and science.

The first four titles, to be published in November, are :—

Art and Morality
R. W. Beardsmore

Essays on Moral Concepts
R. M. Hare

Practical Inferences
R. M. Hare

The Concept of Justice
N. M. L. Nathan

Early Greek Philosophy and the Orient

M. L. West

In this wide-ranging study, Dr. West provides detailed documentation for the thesis that Ionian thought, particularly between 550 and 480 B.C., was invaded and fertilized by a throng of Oriental conceptions. He is concerned to establish lines of transmission where possible, and relate the evidence to a coherent historical framework. 8 plates

Peter Abelard's Ethics

Translated and edited by D. E. Luscombe

Abelard's penetrating and historically important critique of medieval moral thought was an attempt to convince his contemporaries that many of the conventional moral judgements of French society were ill conceived and unjust and that the penitential system enforced by bishops was based upon ignorance and bad theology. Bertrand Russell's Best: Silhouettes in Satire

With a Preface by BERTRAND RUSSELL
Edited by ROBERT E. EGNER, Professor of Philosophy, Wisconsin

The works of Bertrand Russell have made such a deep impression on modern thinking that little need be said by way of introduction. Books by Russell and books about Russell are already in large number. The present volume attempts to offer something which is, so far, unique: a careful selection of some of the wittiest and most pungent of Russell's quotations combed from his various writings. This selection has resulted in a volume which is instructive and delightful, both for the philosopher and the layman; for the latter the essays introducing the sections will provide a sufficient background for understanding the context of the quotations. After covering this volume it is hoped that the reader will appreciate that serious thought and keen humour make an excellent partnership as well as understand why Russell has been both an influential and controversial figure for more than half a century.

The Absolute and the Atonement

DOM ILLTYD TRETOWAN
Monk of Downside

'The awareness of God is the basis of all philosophy worthy of the name. The awareness of God in Christ is the heart of true religion.' With these words Dom Illtyd Tretowan defines the essence of his thinking in The Absolute and the Atonement. In his earlier work, Absolute Value, he examined man's knowledge and awareness of God. In this promised sequel he proceeds from there to investigate the central problems of the Christian faith, presenting his arguments in a clear and readable way which cannot fail to be of interest to anyone at all concerned about the subject.

The Thought of Karl Marx

An Introduction

David McLellan

David McLellan has written this comprehensive text for the reader who requires an introduction to and understanding of Karl Marx's thoughts. He combines a descriptive account of Marx's writings with a synopsis of certain themes central to Marx's thoughts. An extensive bibliography is included. £3.50 paperback £1.50

Linguistic Analysis and Phenomenology

Edited by Wolfe Mays and S. C. Brown

This volume contains the six symposia of the 'Philosophers into Europe' Conference held at Southampton University in 1969, the object of which was to bring together English and Continental philosophers in an interchange of views. The conference attempted to find a bridge between linguistic philosophy and phenomenology and to see if these two styles of philosophy can be unified. £5.00

Function, Purpose and Powers

(2nd Edition)

Dorothy Emmet

Foreword by Victor Turner

A critic said of the first edition: 'a fascinating, profound and beautifully articulated book. It is an excellent example, and one can only hope that there will be many more, of what can be done with semantic and linguistic technique when the philosopher has been able to make a genuine tool of observation. . . . Professor Emmet is to be congratulated on a book which demands serious consideration by those who have the duty of making practical decisions on behalf of the rest of us.' Times Literary Supplement

Two new titles in the Philosophy of Religion Series

Edited by J. H. Hick

Contemporary Critiques of Religion

Kai Nielsen

This book is a careful statement of an empiricist critique of the putative truth-claims of religion, the assessment of the criticism and a developed, original reply. Professor Nielsen isolates the central intellectual perplexities concerning Judeo-Christian belief, and examines the contemporary empiricist critiques of religion to show how the very concept of God or mature Judeo-Christianity is so problematic as to be of questionable coherence. £2.80

Problems of Religious Knowledge

Terence Penelhum

This book is an introduction to the epistemology of religious faith and an exploration of its problems. The author's objective is a clearer understanding of the nature of the division between believers and sceptics and the extent to which the division is capable of resolution by philosophical methods. The common beliefs that religious doctrines can or cannot be proved, verified or known through revelation, are examined by Professor Penelhum and he concludes that these issues are commonly misunderstood because of unexamined assumptions about man's freedom to control what he believes. £2.80
