The Rebuilding of Italy

By M. H. H. MACARTNEY

The author impartially discusses the main features of the principal problems by which the New Italy is faced, under the following heads: Administrative and Social Problems, Economic Prospects, Foreign Policy, The Vatican, The Spirit of the Future. The book is clear, outspoken, and informed by an understanding of the prevailing character of the Italian people. 3s. 6d. net

The Study of Ecclesiastical History

By NORMAN SYKES

An inaugural lecture, in which Professor Sykes describes the modern rise of Ecclesiastical History as a subject of study, points to the contributions made to it by such outstanding exponents as Mandell Creighton, Whitney, Gwatkin, &c., discusses the recent tendency towards specialized research, and its virtues and dangers, and closes with a claim for ecclesiastical history as "the supreme refutation of the impersonal view of history". 1s. 6d. net

Bishop Reginald Pecock

A study in ecclesiastical history and thought

By V. H. H. GREEN

Pecock, the fifteenth-century Bishop of Chichester, whose trial for heresy and public abjuration to save himself from burning is the best remembered event in his life, here receives the full study he deserves. Mr Green describes all that is known of his career, his early years, his years in London, and as a Bishop, his trial and sentence, his recantation, his appeal to Rome and his retirement and death in obscurity.

Edited for the British Society for International Understanding

by JOHN EPPSTEIN

The object of this new series of pocketable books is to give the essential background of each country, some knowledge of the characteristics and customs of its people, and reliable information about the effect of the present war upon them; all of which will be of practical value to citizens of the world, especially to those whose duties may carry them into those countries. Folding Map. 3s. net each
