Editorial Policy

International Legal Materials is a collection of current documents designed to provide up-to-date information to scholars, practicing lawyers, legal advisers to government agencies and corporations, national and international officials, and others concerned with the legal aspects of public and private international relations. These documents primarily consist of current materials not readily available in most libraries.

The term international law is interpreted broadly for the purposes of this publication. Some of the materials may be of a kind normally classified under other rubrics, such as foreign law, comparative law, conflict of laws, constitutional law, international organization, and the like. The main criterion in selecting materials is that the document be of substantial interest to a large number of legal scholars, practicing lawyers and officials dealing with public and private international matters. It is recognized that these interests may vary considerably among users of the publication in the United States and elsewhere.

International Legal Materials reproduces by photo-offset the official documents whenever possible. In some instances, the documents are reproduced from unofficial typescript when texts are unavailable or when a translation is given.

Readers are invited to draw the Editor's attention to documents meriting reproduction in International Legal Materials.

EDITORIAL NOTE

This 1970–1979 Index for International Legal Materials has been gestating much longer than we anticipated. We sincerely apologize for the delay and hope you will agree that the additional time has produced a reference tool that makes the raw material of ILM during the past decade alive and accessible and more useful than when we first carried the documents in ILM.

We have included entry into force dates for treaties and agreements or, if they had not yet entered into force as of a certain date, have indicated that date so the researcher can pursue his own investigation of entry into force. This ten-year index contains over 100 general subject headings as well as conferences, countries, geographic areas, and international organizations. These are conveniently listed to enable the user to identify quickly the category most likely to contain the information sought. Acronyms used throughout the index are defined. A list of “Negotiating Conferences Reported” provides a reference to the exact title, place, and time of international negotiating conferences held during this period. The “Table of Cases Reported” from international tribunals and national courts provides citations to official reporters when attainable. The US cases are tracked from beginning to end and include all available citations even though some documents may not have been reproduced in ILM. References to information contained in ILM prior to 1970 are included when thought to be especially useful to the researcher.

International Legal Materials is indebted to Wendy Nordvik Roth for the final product of indexing the ten ILM volumes containing over 15,000 pages of documentary materials. The task was carried out with care, cheerfulness, and creativity. The assistance of Robert Slutz and Erik Peterson in obtaining entry into force dates and checking index cards went beyond the call of duty. Anna Barton, Marynell DeVaughn, Cynthia Huber, and Benjamin Brown provided help in creating the Table of Cases, the compilation of Negotiating Conferences, and the list of acronyms. The ASIL staff, in particular Janet Ostendarp, has done yeoman’s work. All is greatly appreciated.
