THE ARTS IN EARLY ENGLAND

By G. BALDWIN BROWN, M.A.

Prepared for Press by E. H. L. SEXTON, M.A.

VOLUME VI. PART II. ANGLO-SAXON SCULPTURE

The subject of the Carved Crosses and other monuments of Anglo-Saxon Sculpture is treated in a broad and general manner, the works, so far as they can be judged from existing remains, being exhibited as representing a remarkable artistic achievement in a style of which the British Isles have a complete monopoly.

Dr froulkes, who is Master of Armouries at the Tower, describes processes of manufacture, in iron and bronze, and the types of guns, from 1450 to 1800, and follows with accounts of the important foundries and a list of all known foundries of England and the Continent.

KINGS' DAUGHTERS

By J. C. SORLEY. 7s. 6d. net

This book contains seven separate character studies of women whose pleasure it was to endow learning by benefactions to Cambridge. Among them are Eleanor of Castile, Margaret of Anjou, and Frances Sidney.

THE SECRET LANGUAGES OF IRELAND

By R. A. S. MACALISTER. 16s. net

Secret languages were used in Ireland both by the Druids and in the early Christian period; and in later times a complete language, Shelta, was in use as a thieves' cant in the underworld. The romantic story of its discovery by C. G. Leland and its analysis by John Sampson is here told; and it is shown to have affinities with the ancient secret languages.
