Preface

Studies in Church History 53 takes as its theme 'Translating Christianity'. It represents the product of the Ecclesiastical History Society's Summer Conference and Winter Meeting for 2015-16, held under the presidency of Simon Ditchfield at the University of York in July 2015 and the Institute for Historical Research, London, in January 2016.

As is clear from this rich collection of articles, which brings together the plenary lectures and a peer-reviewed selection of the communications offered at the Summer Conference and Winter Meeting, translation is fundamental to Christianity and to the spread of its ideas and practices. We would like to thank Professor Ditchfield for encouraging the Society to engage with this fruitful theme, and also for his leadership of the Society as President for 2015-16. Our thanks go too to all who presented papers at these two very stimulating and successful conferences; this was the first year that communications were offered at the Winter Meeting and we are pleased that this proved such a successful initiative. Those who attended these meetings, chaired sessions and participated in the discussions all contributed to the further development of our understanding of the multi-faceted and multi-layered translations of Christianity. The editors are also grateful to the peer reviewers for their time and their insights, and to authors for their willingness to offer their work for publication and to engage with the editorial process. Dr Tim Grass has once again provided unstinting help as Assistant Editor; we would like to thank him for his engagement and the Ecclesiastical History Society for funding his post.

The Summer Conference and Winter Meeting could not have taken place without the efforts of the Society's Conference Secretary, Professor Michael Walsh, the conference team at the University of York, the Society's Secretary, Dr Gareth Atkins, and the staff of the IHR. To them too thanks are also due.

Last, but by no means least, we would like to congratulate Miriam Adan Jones, this year's winner of the Kennedy Prize for the best article by a postgraduate student accepted for publication in Studies in
