Women Farmers in Africa Rural Development in Mali and the Sahel

Edited by Lucy E. Creevey
Foreword by Ruth S. Morgenthau

"Fills a real need... An unusual and valuable contribution to the literature on women in rural development."—Barbara Lewis, Rutgers University
Many of the eleven essays in this collection are by African women in charge of ongoing projects in Mali and Upper Volta and thus provide first-hand accounts of the women farmers and the various programs trying to assist them.

Women in Egyptian Public Life

Earl L. Sullivan

Egypt is the most progressive of all the Arab countries, a fact reflected in the role and position of women. Sullivan discusses women in Parliament (more than in either the U.S. Congress or the Israeli Knesset), the political opposition, and business, as well as the wives of Egypt's Presidents—Sullivan interviewed Jihan Sadat and Suzanne Mubarak for this book.

Development and Social Change in Rural Egypt

Richard H. Adams, Jr.

Adams spent nearly two years living and working with peasant farmers and agricultural officials in two villages in upper and lower Egypt. His findings reveal that the Egyptian government's planned rural reform program has been far from a success.

Race, Culture, and Portuguese Colonialism in Cabo Verde

Deirdre Meintel

Syracuse University's Maxwell School has published the first complete ethnography of the Cape Verde Islands, an Atlantic archipelago that was for centuries a point of transshipment for slaves being taken to the Americas. Of all Portugal's colonies, Cabo Verde seemed to best exemplify Freyre's "Lusotropicalism." As in Brazil, extensive miscegenation, a fluid and complex system of racial categories, and the absence of legalized discrimination all seemed to preclude the existence of a color bar. This study demonstrates that in fact, a racial hierarchy flourished, legitimized by certain notions of "culture" on both the popular and official levels. At the same time, it shows how "culture," notably in the areas of language and religion, became an arena of popular resistance to colonial hegemony.

In naming Race, Culture, and Portuguese Colonialism in Cabo Verde one of 1985's Outstanding Academic Books, Choice

magazine described it as "a fascinating portrait of daily life in a Portuguese-African milieu.... an extremely worthy addition to the literature on the Portuguese-speaking world."

The Development of Capitalism in Africa

JOHN SENDER and SHEILA SMITH

This book argues that one of the reasons for the poor economic performance of some African countries has been the absence of a coherent analytical basis on which to formulate effective state interventions and macro-economic strategies.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
