CONTRIBUTORS

GERALD J. BENDER is Director of the School of International Relations at the University of Southern California and past president of the African Studies Association. Bender specializes in U.S. policy toward Africa and, in particular, southern Africa. He has traveled to southern Africa ten times during the past three years.

FIDELIS P. MTATIFIKOLO is a lecturer in economics at the University of Dar-es-Salaam. As winner of the Third World Research Fellowship of the Institute for International Economics, Washington, D. C., he served as Visiting Fellow during the 1986-87 academic year. Mtatifikolo's research and writing has focused on the public sector in Tanzania and the impact of international trade and commodity agreements on developing countries.

KAREN A. MINGST is associate professor of political science at the University of Kentucky. Her publications include articles on international law and organization, political economy, and Africa's role in international organizations. She is at work on two volumes, one on the African Development Bank, and a second on U.S. participation in international organizations.

TIMOTHY OBERST is a graduate student in the department of history at Columbia University.

I.K. SUNDIATA is an associate professor of history at the University of Illinois (Chicago). He has worked on West African labor migration and is currently at work on a study of Equatorial Guinea.

PETER K. TIBENDERANA is an associate professor of history at Ahmadu Bello University. A specialist in the contemporary history of northern Nigeria, his most recent publication is "The Role of the British Administration in the Appointment of the Emirs of Northern Nigeria 1903-1931," Journal of African History (1987).

DWAYNE WOODS is a graduate student at the University of Chicago. His dissertation is a study of regional development in the Ivory Coast.

Francophone Sub-Saharan Africa, 1880-1985

Patrick Manning

This book introduces the student to the history of Francophone sub-Saharan Africa during the past century. Events are viewed from the perspective of the people of the area, but the author also weaves into the story the European heritage of France and Belgium, the rich heritage of Africa, and the worldwide forces of colonialism and capitalism.

$42.50 hardcover, $12.95 paperback

African Capitalism

The Struggle for Ascendancy

Paul Kennedy

Drawing upon material from a number of countries and a range of academic disciplines, this book provides an analysis of African capitalism that offers a positive view of its role. In Africa as elsewhere, it has been in the arena of politics and ideology, centered on the struggle to exercise state power, that the fate of private indigenous capitalism so often has been determined.

About $42.50 hardcover, about $12.95 paperback

The African Worker

Bill Freund

In this book, the history of the emergence of a wage-earning class is outlined and its various cultural, social, and political forms are discussed. The classic issues of trade union organization and politics are examined, as well as new themes concerned with workers in the informal sector, women, rural workers, and the relationship of the working class to the broader society.

$34.50 hardcover, $10.95 paperback

Drought and Hunger in Africa

Denying Famine a Future

Michael H. Glantz, Editor

This volume assesses the impact of drought as a major factor in the agrarian crisis of sub-Saharan Africa.

"This book is an extraordinary odyssey through the travails of Africa's crisis...its grasp of political, economic, social and environmental issues is vigorous and wide-ranging." —New Scientist

$29.95 paperback

Inequality in Africa

Political Elites, Proletariat, Peasants and the Poor

E. Wayne Nafziger

This study of inequality in Africa rejects the orthodox approach of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, which neglects income distribution and advocates greater external economic reliance. The author believes that reducing inequality requires democratizing political participation as well as economic control.
