*American Culture,
the Discourse of Species,
and Posthumanism*

CARY WOLFE

"Offers exciting new readings of a rich variety of texts. This is an original and provocative work that will open up important new arenas of discussion in literary and cultural studies, as well as the discourse of animal rights."

Forthcoming in February A Sense of Things

The Object Matter of American Literature

BILL BROWN

Focusing on the turn-of-the-century fiction that accompanied the so-called "tyranny of things" in America, A Sense of Things promises to reshape the way readers understand the representation of the artifactual world and the circuits of economic and psychic exchange through which subjects and objects animate each other. While doing so, it begins a whole new chapter in literary and cultural studies. It shifts the critical emphasis away from subjects and toward objects, insists that the subject-object relation is irreducible to the logic of consumer culture, and shows how literature means to grant material objects a voice of their own.

Kafka Goes to the Movies

HANNS ZISCHLER

Translated by Susan H. Gillespie

The noted German actor and director offers an account of Kafka as an indulgently curious writer, one who used the cinema as a place of enjoyment and escape, and as a medium for his ambivalent encounter with modern life.

"A mad and beautiful project, which sends the reader spinning and tumbling into one of the great artistic minds of the last century. Zischler's book is a gem."—Paul Auster

Henry Miller, Happy Rock

BRASSAI

Translated by Jane Marie Todd

This book presents a vivid portrait of two close friends through a number of warm, intimate conversations. Brassai and Miller revisit their careers; discuss art, literature, Paris, Greece, and more; and consider the lives and works of many others in their circle, including Lawrence Durrell, Henri Matisse, Salvador Dalí, André Malraux, Paul Klee, and Amedeo Modigliani.

The Mourner's Song War and Remembrance from the Iliad to Vietnam

JAMES TATUM

"The classicist James Tatum has taken two numinous texts, Homer's Iliad and Maya Lin's Vietnam Memorial, and studied them in their various dimensions along with other voices like Robert Lowell and General Grant, creating something new out of man's obsession with war and memory that roves back—like the rose—through so many wild centuries to our origins and the titanic wrath of Achilles before the walls of Troy."—Gore Vidal

How to Do the History of Homosexuality

DAVID M. HALPERIN

"In this subtle and provocative work, David Halperin carries his justly renowned scholarship about sexuality several steps further, articulating a view that balances a just appreciation of discontinuities with the recognition of connections across time and place. Refusing reductive characterizations, the sophisticated arguments in How to Do the History of Homosexuality emphasize heterogeneity and tension in the ancient world and our own, and the possibility of creative identification with the past."—Martha Nussbaum

This new anthology contains the tools students need to read, comprehend, and enjoy the best the world has to offer — including thematic groupings of literature from all over the world; social and historical contexts, comparative timelines, abundant maps, hundreds of images, and much more. It's the first anthology to acknowledge the wide geographical and chronological range of material students are being asked to cover in the world literature course — and then do something about it.

- Six paperback books — available in two packages or as individual texts — correspond to the six periods most commonly taught. Each book features a striking two-color design that showcases the literature, highlights pedagogical features, and sets off the many maps and illustrations to best effect.
- Superb collection of complete longer works, plays, prose, and poems represents the best literature of all time available in English or English translations from around the globe. Unique “In the World” clusters emphasize social and historical contexts.
- Practical and accessible editorial apparatus helps students understand what they read and allows them to place literature in a larger context. Resources inside the anthology include Time and Place boxes, Bibliographies, Connections questions, and a Glossary of Literary and Historical Terms. An extensive Instructor's Manual and a rich Web site, World Literature Online, provide additional support.
