Harriet Martineau's Letters to Fanny Wedgwood

Edited by Elisabeth Sanders Arbuckle. This annotated collection of 121 previously unpublished letters from Martineau to Fanny Wedgwood and her family portrays a lasting friendship between two Victorian women of lively intelligence and keen social awareness. Written between 1834 and 1871, the letters cover a longer period and display a wider range of activities than any other extant correspondence of this influential writer, who for almost 50 years published a series of books and articles on virtually all the important issues of the day. The letters comment on events on both sides of the Atlantic, are peppered with gossip and news of Martineau's myriad activities, and contain interesting insights on her acquaintance with such prominent figures as Charles Darwin, Charles Dickens, Thomas Carlyle, and Charlotte Brontë. $29.50

Probability and Certainty In Seventeenth-Century England

A Study of the Relationships Between Natural Science, Religion,
History, Law, and Literature

BARBARA J. SHAPIRO

"This ambitious and provocative work describes a revolutionary change in the English climate of opinion from a general conviction that certain knowledge was attainable to a resignation that only probable knowledge was possible. The author reviews the fields of natural science and religion, history, law, witchcraft and literature, in order to describe some of the interrelationships that united them in this revolutionary change. Everyone interested in this period will be bound to take notice of the book even if they disagree with it."

—Joseph M. Levine, Syracuse University

Challenging conventional distinctions between the humanities and the natural sciences, Barbara J. Shapiro demonstrates that most seventeenth-century English intellectuals shared an approach to questions of investigation and proof that tended to unify religious, scientific, historical, legal, and literary thought.

A Hundred Years Ago

Britain in the 1880s in
Words and Photographs
Colin Ford and Brian Harrison

The 1880s was the decade of Treasure Island, Gilbert & Sullivan, and Victoria's Jubilee. It was also the first decade in British history for which there is an in-depth photographic record of people's lives—from the aristocracy to the poor.

Combining their unique perspectives as photographic historian and social historian, Ford and Harrison interweave photographs and text to illuminate a wide range of Victorian experience.

Chapters include childhood, family life, work, recreation, illness, old age, and death.

With over 239 photographs, many published for the first time.

The Diary of Samuel Pepys
Volume X, Companion
Volume XI, Index
Edited by Robert Latham and William Matthews

At last, the final two volumes of the renowned California edition of The Diary of Samuel Pepys. This edition has become justly regarded as the definitive version of Pepys's Diary. Volume X is the Companion to the nine-volume Diary. It is not only an essential adjunct to the text, but forms in its own right a unique and comprehensive work of reference on seventeenth-century England. Volume XI is the complete Index, categorizing a massive variety of information from the nine volumes. The entries are both accessible and valuably detailed, frequently including editorial information to identify or elaborate on Pepys's own references. Volume X: 652 pages, $35.00. Volume XI: 368 pages, $35.00. Special offer: The 11-volume set $320.00

England's Rise to Greatness, 1660–1763
Edited by Stephen Baxter

In 1660 England was already prosperous, free, civilized, and the possessor of the makings of an empire. In the century to follow, the island nation became the world's greatest power. This cohesive collection of essays illuminates important facets of the political history of England from the Restoration to the American War of Independence. 400 pages, illustrated, $29.95

Emotion and High Politics
Personal Relations at the Summit in Late Nineteenth-Century
Britain and Germany
by Judith M. Hughes

Hughes offers a psychoanalytic explanation of why British and German leaders, from the 1880s on, failed to understand one another. Stressing the preoedipal mothering relationship, she argues that tempers rooted in childhood produced two contrasting patterns of behavior which set up an almost insuperable barrier to mutual comprehension. 248 pages, $28.50

THE JOURNAL OF BRITISH STUDIES

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
AT CHICAGO
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The Journal of British Studies, founded in 1961, is published at the University of Illinois at Chicago under the auspices of the North American Conference on British Studies. It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity College alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957) who contributed funds to the College for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history. Several Trinity alumni subsequently contributed to the fund. The University of Illinois at Chicago now supports the publication of the Journal.

The North American Conference on British Studies is a scholarly society affiliated with the American Historical Association and open to anyone in the United States and Canada interested in British civilization in its several aspects: historical, archaeological, literary, artistic, political, and sociological. Its North American constituency comprises about 800 members drawn from the fifty states and the ten provinces. Affiliated with the parent organization are seven regional conferences (New England, Middle Atlantic, South, Midwest, Rocky Mountain, Pacific Coast, and Northwest), each having its own officers, programs, and other activities and with a combined membership of more than 2,000. The Conference convenes at least once a year in the autumn, usually in joint session with one of its regional affiliates. It seeks to encourage the serious study of British history, literature, politics, as well as allied subjects, and among the general reading public through meetings, book prizes, association with likeminded organization in North American and Britain, and through its publications program.

The Conference sponsors a wide variety of publications. The Journal of British Studies is published at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle. Another journal, Albion, issued four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and sent to all members of the parent organization, includes articles, the proceedings of the Conference at its regional and national meetings, and book reviews. The Conference also sponsors several book series, including Current Research in British Studies, a periodic survey of research in progress, edited and published at Kansas State University, Manhattan; Studies in British History and Culture, a periodic survey of research in progress, edited and published at Kansas State University, Manhattan; Studies in British History and Culture, a monograph series, edited at Wittenberg University, Springfield, Ohio, and published by Archon Books; and a biographical series, edited at Indiana University at South Bend, and published by Shoestring

Press. Another series, on bibliography, is edited at Stanford University and published by Cambridge University Press. The Conference's newsletter, The British Studies Intelligencer, also sent to its members, is published at the University of California, Irvine. It contains notices of meetings throughout North America and Britain devoted to British studies, news of appointments, moves, and retirements by those active in the profession, announcements of major new research projects, and notes on current publications and individual research in progress.

Through the award of a number of book prizes, the Conference seeks to encourage publications in the fields of British history, culture, and politics.

The Journal of British Studies appears twice in the academic year, in the Fall and in the Spring. Inquiries about subscriptions should be directed to Bentley B. Gilbert, Editor, The Journal of British Studies, Department of History, University of Illinois at Chicago, Box 4348, Chicago, Illinois 60680.

Manuscripts, not exceeding 8,000 words of text, should be sent also to Professor Bentley B. Gilbert at the same address. Please send two copies and a self-addressed return stamped envelope.
