

Modern Editions of Classic Works for Today's Readers

THE AMERICAN COMMONWEALTH

In Two Volumes
By James Bryce

In American studies there are two classics of the nineteenth century by foreign observers. In Democracy in America (1835) the Frenchman Alexis de Tocqueville interpreted American society through the lens of political theory. In 1888, the Scotsman James Bryce examined "the institutions and the people of America as they are." Interviews and even friendships with leading citizens, and travels throughout the land, enabled Bryce to produce "a grand atlas" of American society and political institutions. "Why Good Men Do Not Go Into Politics" and "Why Great Men Are Not Chosen Presidents" are typical discoveries that emerge from Bryce's cogent explanations of the actual operations of political parties and municipal and state governments. Bryce later served as England's ambassador to the United States from 1907-1913. The new Liberty Fund edition of his masterpiece includes contemporaneous (1889) reviews by Woodrow Wilson and Lord Acton.

The United States and the Integration of Europe

Legacies of the Postwar Era

Edited by Francis H. Heller and John R. Gillingham

Francis Heller and John Gillingham have assembled a group of the most prominent scholars in politics and history to look at the question of European integration and the role the United States has played, and will continue to play, in it. Looking at the areas of diplomacy, industry, security, trade, finance and the rise of the multinational corporation, the scholars represented in this book present a multifaceted portrait of the sometimes tenuous relationship the United States has undertaken with respect to the reality of European integration.

Hungary and the Victor Powers

Eric Roman

Eric Roman is the first scholar to be granted access to the vast, previously inaccessible archive of documents relating to the communist era in Hungary. This archive included the files of the Hungarian Communist Party, the Social Democrat Party, and the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party, as well as the minutes of political committee meetings, private correspondence, secret papers and confidential reports on special commissions within Hungary. Skillfully using all of this material, Eric Roman has created a fascinating portrait of Hungary in the Post War Period.

Chirac's Challenge

Liberalization, Europeanization, and Malaise in France

Edited by John T.S. Keeler and Martin A. Schain

In this book, the authors have assembled a group of scholars to look closely at the last decade of government in France under Mitterand, Chirac's promise of profound change, and the malaise that has gripped the voters in France. In essays that deal with four major areas—Institutions and the Policymaking Process; Business, Labor, and the Economy; The Politics of Social Policy; and The Challenges of European Integration—the authors of Chirac's Challenge look at the ways in which this changing socio-political environment will transform the established patterns of policymaking in France.

Being and Truth

THOMAS LANGAN

In his earlier volume, Tradition and Authenticity in the Search for Ecumenic Wisdom, Thomas Langan explored the distinctive kinds of truth handed on by the various genera of explicit traditions and raised the question of relating the many truth claims coming from all kinds of experience into a responsible, meaningful vision of reality. In Being and Truth, the author works at laying a foundation for this concept in the form of a theory of knowledge and a theory of being that can find a place for all of these differing realities. June, 368 pages, $39.95

The Design of Heaven

DALE S. KUEHNE
