

Shadows in the Grass

Britain in the Southern Sudan, 1918–1956

Robert O. Collins

One of the foremost scholars of the Sudan portrays the transitional years of British imperial rule in the area by describing in lively detail the efforts of the colonial government to develop the foundations of a modern society. Collins' book thus becomes not only an original and fascinating contribution to African scholarship but also a guide for the modern Sudanese who are attempting to develop their native land.

Ideology and Development in Africa

Crawford Young

'A fascinating, well-balanced and informative discussion of those states which, to the author, best exemplify the three ideological options he wishes to compare . . . Ideological variation is both a cause and a consequence of differences in regime performance, and it is the careful documentation of this complex relationship . . . which make this a worthwhile and valuable book.'—David Brown, International Affairs

Woman the Gatherer

edited by Frances Dahlberg

'Refreshing and challenging . . . Woman the Gatherer will certainly help clear up some of the misconceived notions that are all too popular in society.'—Richard E. Leakey

'An important addition to the growing body of material on the roles and contributions of women to societies of the hunting-gathering past and present.'—Jane B. Lancaster, Ethology and Sociobiology

Constitutional Relations between Britain and India

Documents on the Transfer of Power 1942-47

Begun in 1967 and completed in 1983, this monumental twelve-volume series on the last years of British rule in India has won critical acclaim for its outstanding contribution to Indian and Commonwealth history. The editors were given unrestricted access to the records and the freedom to select for publication many documents which had never before been published. Drawn from a variety of sources (including reports, correspondence, minutes and, in Volumes X-XII, the Mountbatten Papers), the documents provide a unique insight into the making of British policy in India and the process by which India and Pakistan attained independence.

'the volumes afford probably the most complete evidence published for the decision-making process in government anywhere.' W. Golant in History

Volume XII (Princes, Partition and Independence. 8 July – 15 August 1947) covers the final weeks of British rule and includes Mountbatten's personal report of the last hectic days of his Viceroyalty. The documents reveal his doubts about accepting the Governor-Generalship of India alone, and bring out the lack of resources available to combat the breakdown of law and order in the Punjab, and the controversy over the position of the princely states and their future relationship with the two new dominions.

Constitutional Relations between Britain and Burma

Burma: The Struggle for Independence 1944-1948

Editor: Hugh Tinker

In January 1948 Burma became the first country to leave the British Empire through negotiated independence. The history of the struggle for that independence has been brought together in this new two-volume series. It follows the pattern of the Transfer of Power series on India, letting history speak for itself through documents, letters and records.

Volume I From Military Occupation to Civil Government 1 January 1944 – 31 August 1946

The period leading up to independence in Burma saw the British Government engaged in attempts to stress the positive aspects of continued membership of the Empire, while the Burmese leaders gradually resolved to follow their own chosen course. Volume I deals with the two years from military occupation to civil government. It traces the road from Burmese resistance to Japanese occupation through the coming of Mountbatten, the end of hostilities and the restless post-war period under Sir Hubert Rance. In addition to the contemporary documents, the book includes personal memoirs of six individuals who played leading parts in the events of the time: Sir Arthur Bruce, the Very Reverend G. Appleton, F.S.V. Donnison, T.L. Hughes, Sir John Wise and Sir Hubert Rance himself.

The Cambridge History of Iran

Volume 3 The Seleucid, Parthian and Sasanid Periods

Edited by EHSAN YAR-SHATER

The Cambridge History of Iran is planned as a seven-volume survey. Although all aspects of Iranian civilisation are studied, the aim is to provide a collection of readable essays rather than a catalogue of information. This volume, published in two parts for ease of handling, covers the period from the death of Alexander in 323 BC to the advent of Islam in the seventh century AD.

It includes a consideration of Iran's interaction with neighbouring societies, and of Iranian settlements outside Iran and Afghanistan.
