New World Gold

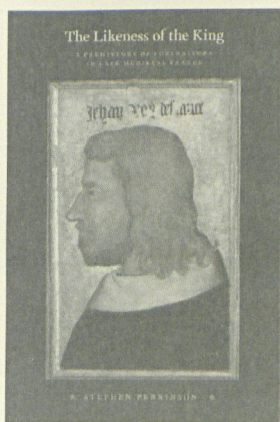

Cultural Anxiety and Monetary Disorder in Early Modern Spain

Elvira Vilches

“New World Gold will be an important amalgam of work in disparate genres, rarely united: economic theory and literary criticism. Vilches has mastered both. She has written a provocative cultural analysis of colonial wealth and money.”

—Karen Graubart, University of Notre Dame

The Likeness of the King

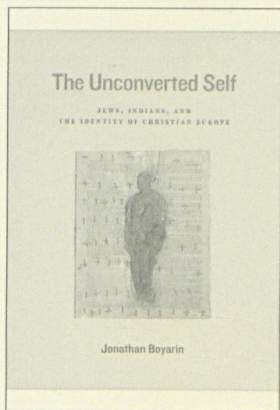

A Prehistory of Portraiture in Late Medieval France

Stephen Perkinson

“The Likeness of the King provides a strong account of late-medieval aesthetics and specific, concrete examples of image-making and the often political needs it served. It offers smart handling of literary, philosophical, and archival sources; close and insightful reading of images; and a willingness to counter received ideas.”

—Rebecca Zorach, University of Chicago

The Unconverted Self

Jews, Indians, and the Identity of Christian Europe

Jonathan Boyarin

“Intelligent and provocative. Boyarin approaches a major question in Western intellectual history, Europe’s formative encounter with its ‘others,’ through a deep cultural reading linking the Christian treatment of Jews during the Middle Ages and the colonial encounter with the Amerindians of the New World.”—Margarita Zamora, University of Wisconsin–Madison
