

chure introducing the life and work of the sisters of the Third Order Conventual in England. It is to be had from any Dominican convent and shows how varied and yet united the life can be.

FETES ET SAISONS (December) takes St Francis of Assisi for its theme, a subject admirably suited to the genius of its editors. St Francis appeals to so many in England, and here they will be shown the saint very much in place in Assisi and yet the saint of the day for all countries.

THE MASS—MY LIFE, the Y.C.W. pamphlet written to instruct the young workers in the central doctrine of the Mass and to be used in the religious enquiries in their meetings has been reprinted (1s., from 62 Abbey Road, S.W.9) and it is certainly worth procuring by teachers and instructors of all kinds as well as for students and workers.

EVANGELISER, which is one of the only reviews devotedly exclusively to the modern apostolate, is concerned in its November issue with the contact between priests and laity in the parish—a most vital problem in forming the foundation of the apostolate in the parish.

CULTURE CATHOLIQUE (La Colombe; September) gives 100 pages to a work of summary and synthesis on the origin of French spirituality in the sixteenth century by Louis Cognet.
