COVER: BUREAU OF PUBLIC ROADS-SPONSORED "GOOD ROADS TRAIN." This train travelled through the South for five months beginning in October 1901 disseminating information on improved methods of highway construction. Note the cars carrying road-building equipment, used for building model roads. (Reprinted from U.S. Department of Agriculture, Office of Public Roads Inquiry, Road Conventions of The Southern States and Object-Lesson Roads, Bulletin No. 23.) For an article on government leadership in highway standardization, see pp. 51–77.

Newcomen Awards in Business History

For the best article published in the Business History Review during the previous year the Society will award a prize of $300 and a scroll. For the best article published in the Business History Review during the previous year by a graduate student or a recent Ph.D. who has not published a book in business history, the Society will award a special prize of $150 and a scroll. Criteria for selection include: originality, value, breadth and interest of contribution, quality of research materials and methods, and quality of presentation.

Winners will be selected by a panel of judges consisting of the editors and the members of the editorial board of the Business History Review, none of whom shall be eligible to receive a prize. The awards are administered by the editorial office of the Review. No special prize will be awarded in years when, in the opinion of the judges, no eligible article suitable for the prize was published, and no person may be awarded both prizes in any one year.

Thomas Newcomen Book Award in Business History

The Newcomen Society in North America, in cooperation with the Business History Review, will award in 1985 the eighth in a series of triennial prizes consisting of $1000 and a scroll for the best book on the history of business published in the United States during the years 1982-1984. "Business history" is defined in its broadest sense to include not only the history of firms or industries, but books tracing interactions of businessmen, analyses of business philosophy or behavior, and studies of the adjustment of businesses and businessmen to their economic, political, and social environments. Criteria for selection will include contribution to knowledge, depth of analysis, soundness of reasoning, clarity of style and organization, and general readability and format.

Judges for the 1985 award will be announced at an appropriate time by the Harvard Business School and the Newcomen Society of the United States.

Editor's Note

We are pleased to present this special issue on transportation to our readership. The practice of publishing special issues began under the editorship of James P. Baughman and was continued by his three successors Glenn Porter, Albro Martin, and James E. Fell, Jr. This is the thirteenth such issue.

The role of the special issue is to provide a focal point for scholars interested in timely and important topics. The Review becomes the vehicle for the publication of recent work on the topic in question and a source for those wishing to pursue further work in the area.

We would like to express our special gratitude to Albro Martin for contributing the introductory essay to this volume. A former editor of this journal and presently Oglesby Professor of the American Heritage at Bradley University, Professor Martin is one of the foremost experts on transportation history. We feel that his introductory essay enhances the value of the issue by putting the articles and the note and reply in a broad framework and by providing critical commentary.
